HELD 7 YEARS

Ex-Viet POW Kills Himself

HARRISON, N.Y. (UPI) — An Air Force captain who felt "reborn" only four months ago when he was released after more than seven years as a prisoner of war in North Vietnam, apparently committed suicide because he came to feel "life is not worth living," police said Sunday.

The body of Capt. Edward Allen Brudno, who would have been 33 years old today was found in his in-laws home here about midday with a plastic bag over his head tied on by a rope.

Police said Brudno left nine sealed letters, a will dated March 22, and an open note, written in French, that said in part, "Life is not worth living." His mother-in-law, who found his body, told police he had been "despondent."

The Westchester County medical examiner's office said after examining the body that it would investigate further before assigning an official cause of death. The office said there were "no overt signs of asphyxiation," but it was not ruling that out as the cause.

Brudno's wife, Deborah, was visiting his family in Quincy, Mass., during the weekend and returned here Sunday night. Brudno was born in Quincy, Mass. He attended Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Cambridge, Mass., receiving a B.S. degree in 1963. He entered the Air Force in April 1963 and served in a number of assignments until his assignment to Southeast Asia on temporary duty status in 1965.

He is survived by his wife, Deborah.

A police spokesman said that Brudno left seven letters but declined to reveal their contents or to whom they were addressed.

He said that Mrs. Brudno was enroute to the Gittenstein home from an undisclosed location.

Several neighbors on Crawford Road in Harrison indicated Brudno had kept to himself since moving in with the Gittensteins.

Mrs. Irving Rakoff said, "I've never even known him...I heard about the name. I heard that he had been a prisoner."

Another neighbor, George Pavarini said, "I'll tell you a funny thing: We didn't know until now that he was even living here...we never saw him or knew him."

Dr. Richard S. Wilbur, the Pentagon's top medical officer, said Friday that all the former POWs who were in captivity for long periods displayed some mental stress reactions, manifested by such emotions as depression, flights of euphoria and unjustifiable fear. But he said only four of the total 566 were diagnosed as having "the real psychiatric problem" of schizophrenic reactions.

The symptoms of stress may intensify as the long-term prisoners begin readjusting to life.

Woman Will Pilot Jetliners

FORT WORTH, Tex. (UPI) — The first woman to pilot a passenger jet-liner for a major U.S. airline, Bonnie Tiburzi, will receive her wings today as "one of the boys."

"It's like a dream come true," said Miss Tiburzi, a beautiful brunette of 24, when she was accepted to American Airlines Pilot Training School 10 weeks ago. She had applied to the school for a year before she was accepted.

Emily Howell is already a member of an otherwise all-male crew on a short-haul feeder line for Frontier Airlines. And Eastern Airlines has hired a woman, Barbara J. Barrett, to become its first aviatrix.

Miss Tiburzi first learned to fly at 12 under the tutelage of her father, Gus Tiburzi, a former TWA captain.

"I grew up in a family with a strong father and two brothers," she said. "I did the things my brothers did. I guess I just considered myself one of the boys."

Born in Danbury, Conn., Miss Tiburzi was reared in Florida. Before joining American, she was a flight instructor and charter pilot in Pompano Beach, Fla.

She has a commercial pilot's license both in single engine, land and sea and multi-engine.

55 MPH SPEED LIMIT PROPOSED BY ROCKY

LAKE TAHOE, Nev. (UPI) — Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York proposed Sunday that all states reduce the summer speed limit for automobiles to 55 miles an hour to conserve gasoline during the energy crisis.

Rockefeller made the proposal in a state where there is no speed limit and motorists are accustomed to driving 80 to 90 m.p.h. across the desert.

The Republican governor said, reducing the maximum speed limit to 55 m.p.h. would save about 1.5 per cent in gasoline consumption or 1.4 billion gallons for the entire nation. The limit would be in effect through Sept. 30.

"High speeds hurt fuel efficiencies," Rockefeller said in a prepared statement issued on the eve of the National Governors Conference.

Nevada Gov. Mike O'Callaghan says he would oppose such a move.

Nude Prowler Slain In Fight At GG Home

GARDEN GROVE—A desperate hand-to-hand fight between a homeowner and a nude prowler ended here early Sunday when the homeowner's wife handed him a .22 caliber revolver and he shot the youthful intruder in the face. The prowler died about five hours later in Orange County Medical Center.

The coroner identified the intruder as Larry Baldwin, 17, of 13802 Bowen St., Garden Grove, who died at 6:30 a.m.

Police said Robert Charles Staring, 30, of 9662 Ingram Ave., told him that he and his wife returned home to find a nude man in the living room.

Staring said the prowler attacked him immediately and that during the ensuing struggle he told his wife to get the revolver.

Staring told police his immediate concern was for the safety of his two youngsters and the babysitter, none of whom, it turned out, had been injured.

Police said Staring telephoned them with the first report of the shooting at 1:14 a.m.

Police said they had investigated a report at 1:07 a.m. of a nude man roving the 9600 block of Blake Street and that the investigating officers reported finding a man's clothing strewn in the area, but no sight of the nude man.

The Blake Street area is about two blocks from the Staring residence.

Police said the wounded youth was taken to Westminster Community for emergency treatment.

Nixon 'Willing To Pay $Million For Silence'

—According To Sources Quoting Dean

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ousted White House Counsel John W. Dean has told investigators that President Nixon was involved in the first four months of this year in numerous discussions of cover-up aspects of the Watergate scandal, it was reported Sunday.

The Washington Post cited "reliable sources" in reporting that Dean informed Senate investigators and federal prosecutors that he discussed aspects of a cover-up either directly with the President or in Nixon's presence on at least 35 occasions between January and April.

He was quoted by sources as relating that on one occasion, shortly before the seven convicted defendants were to face sentencing on March 23, Nixon asked how much more they would have to be paid to insure their silence. Dean was said to have told him $1 million and the President was alleged to have replied that there would be no problem paying that amount.

Nixon personally told the nation April 30, and said again May 22, that he had no prior knowledge of the break-in and knew nothing of any efforts to cover up the case or buy silence from the seven men convicted for the wiretapping activities earlier this year.

The White House quickly issued a categorical denial of "the assertions and implications" of the published accounts of Dean's alleged statements to Senate investigators and federal prosecutors after the reports appeared in The Washington Post and The New York Times.

In a parallel development, convicted Watergate conspirator James W. McCord Jr., said he was convinced four months before the bugging and break-in at Democratic headquarters last June 17 that Nixon set the operation in motion, approved it and followed through on it. McCord said he had no direct knowledge of that and was offering only a personal conclusion.

Dean, fired by Nixon on April 30, has been seeking immunity from prosecution in return for his cooperation in telling what he knows of the case and any White House involvement before and after the break-in.

The special Senate Watergate investigating committee, which resumes its televised hearings Tuesday, has scheduled Dean as a witness later in the proceedings.

McCord, who already has testified at length before the Senate committee, was interviewed on television.

The White House denial, issued by Deputy Press Secretary Gerald Warren, said the newspaper stories "appear to be part of a careful coordinated strategy by an individual or individuals determined to prosecute a case against the President in the press using innuendo, distortion of fact and outright falsehood."

Charging there was "manipulation of the press," Warren added: "Its objective, stated in the simplest terms, is to destroy the President. We categorically deny the assertions and implications of this story."

President Nixon's claim that "national security" prompted him to set up a special surveillance unit in the White House, that included McCord, has come under fresh attack in Congress.

Rep. Paul N. McCloskey, R-Calif., who ran in opposition to Nixon's re-nomination last year, urged that a special debate be held on the House floor Wednesday on whether the President was guilty of obstructing justice.

He said in a letter to all House members that they have a constitutional duty to carefully examine presidential actions inasmuch as the House is the sole branch of Congress which can institute impeachment proceedings.

Bus Crash Kills 17

BANGKOK (UPI) — An excursion bus hit a truck Sunday, killing 17 persons and injuring 48, police reported Sunday night. The accident occurred on a highway about 130 miles east of Bangkok.

Soviet Supersonic Jetliner Crashes

FRENCH VILLAGE; 14 DIE

PARIS (UPI) — The first production model of the Soviet Tupolev 144 supersonic jetliner exploded in a ball of flame over the Paris International Air Show Sunday, then crashed in blazing fragments that smashed more than 100 buildings in two villages near Le Bourget airport.

The prefecture of the district said at least 14 persons were killed in the crash, the first of a supersonic civil airliner.

The dead included six crewmen reported to have been aboard the plane, the prefecture said. The other eight victims were in Goussainville, a village of about 15,000 located one mile from the airport on the northern edge of Paris. At least 28 others on the ground were injured.

Pieces of the plane, the pride of the Soviet Union's civil air fleet, rained down on Goussainville and the neighboring hamlet of Tilley, destroying or damaging more than 100 homes, shops and other buildings.

Soviet officials at the air show declined to reveal the number of persons aboard the aircraft at the time of the crash. Air show officials said it carried a crew of six.

Sources identified the pilot as Mikhail Kouslov, who recently flew with test pilots aboard the Western world's supersonic jetliner, the Concorde, which is being produced jointly by Britain and France.

I Saw Plane Shoot Toward Me... I Ran'

GOUSSAINVILLE, France (UPI) — The people of this Parisian suburb were watching the air show over nearby Le Bourget airport when death and destruction rained from the sky.

Blazing pieces of the Soviet supersonic jetliner smashed into Goussainville and its neighboring hamlet of Tilley.

Debris littered a square-mile area encompassing the two villages. Houses and shops were smashed, trees knocked into narrow streets and buildings, automobiles crushed, large areas scorched.

Rescue workers dug through remains of buildings.

The Tupolev 144, which has flown at speeds up to 1,526 miles per hour, and the Concorde have similar body lines. But the engines on the Soviet plane are mounted beneath the fuselage rather than under the wings as on the Concorde.

The Tupolev 144, which made its debut Dec. 31, 1968, one month before the Concorde, had just completed a series of three passes over Le Bourget airport and was banking in preparation for landing when it suddenly appeared to fall.

Its banking angle appeared to be too tight, and cries of "It's falling! It's falling!" erupted from among the 300,000 spectators watching the show from stands at the airport.

The plane's needle-point nose dropped downward as if in a dive, but then the engines mounted beneath the fuselage began to scream and it rose slightly. As it did, flames spouted out of the body of the plane, then a wing flew off, and then the aircraft exploded in a ball of orange fire and black smoke.

Among those who witnessed the explosion and crash of the huge plane was Alexei A. Tupolev, chief designer for the Soviet aircraft industry who had helped his late father, Andrei, design the supersonic craft that carried their family name. The father was for many years the principal airplane designer for the Soviet Union.

About 1,000 feet below the plane when it exploded, many residents of Goussainville and Tilley were standing outside their homes also watching the air show in the cloudy skies above.

"I saw the plane shooting toward me. That image will remain in my mind all my life," said Mrs. Marcelle Coulangue, 52, of Goussainville.

"I just ran. The wreckage hit my house."

Helicopters being used in the air show were commandeered immediately to fly rescue missions for the villages, carrying out the bodies of the dead and injured and bringing in doctors and medical supplies for use in an emergency.

'WE AIM TO PLEASE'

Skylab Spacewalk For Repairs Set

HOUSTON (UPI) — Mission control told the Skylab 1 astronauts Sunday plans were "looking pretty good" for a bold spacewalk within a few days to fix a broken solar cell electrical generator and—as a bonus—look open the broken cover of a key sun-watching telescope.

"Very good," replied Charles "Pete" Conrad, veteran commander of America's first space station crew. "We aim to please. We're more than happy to do anything we can."

Success in the risky walk in space, which could take place as soon as Wednesday, could salvage virtually all of the $2.6-billion Skylab's project's objectives.

Conrad, Joseph P. Kerwin and Paul J. Weitz had just finished a busy 10th day in space during which they flashed home a color telecast panorama of North America from coast to coast and searched from orbit for undiscovered oil and coal fields in Mexico.

In a news conference, meanwhile, a top NASA official said a 10-day extension in the planned four-week Skylab 1 flight would be "very desirable" and looked probable if doctors agreed it would be safe for the astronauts.

Skylab director William C. Schneider also said he would hold an all-day meeting with other top level managers today to make a final determination whether Conrad's crew should venture outside the space station and try to cut or pry open the jammed solar cell power generating wing.

He said if the bold repair work was not attempted—or if it failed—other emergency procedures would be required to let two other crews remain aboard Skylab a full 56 days each later this year.

CONRAD GETS CALL FROM HIS FAMILY

HOUSTON (UPI) — It was just going crazy. That movie was so terrific. We don't wish you were here, we wish we were there."

Charles "Pete" Conrad got happy birthday greetings Saturday from his wife, Jane, and four sons—Peter, 18, Thomas, 16, Andrew, 14, and Christopher, 12—and young Peter's girl friend, Beth Casal, 17, of Uvalde, Tex.

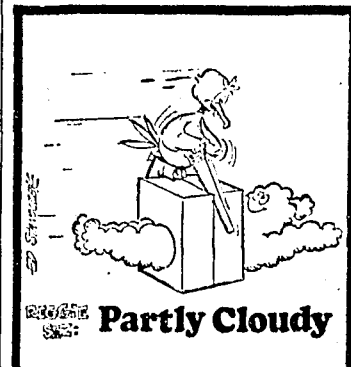

In a sense, Conrad, commander of the Skylab space station, was only 272 miles away. But he was orbiting the earth at 17,114 miles per hour during the radio call from mission control in Houston.

"Hi, deary. You know who this is?" Conrad's wife asked to open the eight-minute birthday call.

The talk was over normal communications lines and not over a special private radio circuit set up for conversations between the astronauts and their families during the long-duration flights.

"The boys ought to be up here," Conrad said. "They would really enjoy this big tank."

"I know it," Mrs. Conrad replied. "We watched the movie (live television from Skylab) yesterday and we were

NEWS HIGHLIGHTS

Egypt Will Seek U.N. Aid To Regain Lands

CAIRO — Egypt is taking its case against Israel to the U.N. Security Council Wednesday, the sixth anniversary of the opening of full hostilities in the 1967 Middle East war. Egyptian officials said their basic goal is to get the council to order complete Israeli withdrawal from Egyptian territory seized in the 1967 war, either immediately or in stages under the aegis of the United Nations.

VC Now Has Diplomats In 32 Countries

SAIGON — The Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government (PRG) has established diplomatic relations with 32 nations, Hanoi's Vietnam News Agency (VNA) said Sunday. The countries recognizing the PRG were identified as the Soviet Union, China, Cuba, East Germany, North Korea, Hungary, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Albania, Bulgaria, Romania, Mongolia, Algeria, Egypt, Cambodia, Yugoslavia, Guinea, Syria, South Yemen, Mauritania, Sudan, Iraq, Mali, Congo, Tanzania, Sri Lanka, Ceylon, Somalia, Chile, Equatorial Guinea, Uganda, Dahomey and Burundi.

Warning System On Smog Devices Ruled

WASHINGTON — The Environmental Protection Agency set rules Sunday requiring 1975 and later model cars to have buzzers or dashboard lights to warn motorists if their air pollution controls get out of order. To meet standards of the Clean Air Act limiting the amount of pollutants in automobile exhaust emissions, the manufacturers are installing devices in the mufflers called catalytic converters and exhaust gas recirculation systems. Because these devices might stop functioning without the driver knowing it, the EPA said, it is requiring the manufacturer to install buzzers, lights or other means of warning when they malfunction.

Missile Downs S. Viet Copter; 6 Killed

SAIGON — A South Vietnamese air force helicopter was shot down by a Soviet-made missile 55 miles northwest of Saigon Sunday, military sources said. Six crewmen were reported killed. The CH-47 Chinook was on a resupply mission just north of the provincial capital of Tay Ninh City when it was brought down by a SA-7 shoulder-fired heat seeking missile at about noon, the sources said. The incident was one of 88 truce violations the South Vietnamese command reported for the 24-hour period that ended at noon Sunday.

Red Antiaircraft Fires At Yank Spotters

PHNOM PENH — Cambodian rebels used antiaircraft fire Sunday against U.S. spotter planes directing American tactical fighters flying southwest of Phnom Penh. There were no reports of any of the planes being hit. Field reports and pilots speaking by radio from their OV-10 Bronco planes said the rebels were firing at them with 12.7mm antiaircraft guns. The spotters were directing strikes by Thailand-based U.S. F-4H fighter-bombers against rebels who surrounded and attacked two government positions about 24 miles southwest of the capital.

South Viet Navy Seizes Ton Of Opium

SAIGON — The South Vietnamese navy Sunday seized one ton of opium concealed in a load of fish on a Thai trawler, informed sources said. Sources said the cache was believed bound for Hong Kong, although some of the drugs may have been destined for the South Vietnamese domestic market. The shipment reportedly originated in Thailand. The opium, after being refined into heroin, would have been worth some $3 million in New York City, the sources estimated. It would have brought one-sixth that amount in Saigon. Thirteen persons were arrested in connection with the seizure, the sources said.

Red China Slightly Revalues Currency

HONG KONG — Red China has revalued its currency by 1.5 per cent against the Hong Kong dollar in a reaction to world monetary instability. All Chinese State-owned banks in Hong Kong, beginning last Friday, quoted the new rate of 38.41 yuan renminbi (RMB) against 100 Hong Kong dollars, compared with the old rate of 38.99 yuan RMB. Financial officials in this British Crown Colony described the Chinese move as a "technical adjustment" that would cause little concern.

3 Killed As Plane Plunges Into Atlantic

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — A Pennsylvania man, his daughter and another teen-ager were killed Sunday when their single-engine plane crashed in thick fog and was submerged for 45 minutes near the Steel Pier amusement center, police said. The victims were identified as Robert L. Custer, 49, the pilot, of Willow Grove, Pa., his daughter, Nancy Lynne, 15, and her girl friend, Michelle O'Donnell, 15, of Upper Merion, Pa. Police said there was no radio contact with Atlantic City Airport before the plane plunged into the ocean. They theorized the plane flew from a field in northeastern Pennsylvania and was attempting to land when it crashed.

Syria To Close Air Space To Lebanon

DAMASCUS — Syria, which closed its border with Lebanon May 8, will bar its air space to Lebanese flights soon, Damascus government sources said Sunday. The sources said the border, which was closed at the height of clashes between the Lebanese army and Palestinian guerrillas, will remain closed indefinitely.

Russ Moon Robot Completes Research

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union's Lunokhod 2 moon robot has completed its research program after 4½ months on the Sea of Serenity, the Tass news agency said Sunday. Lunokhod 2 was delivered to the moon's surface Jan. 16 by the Luna 21 mothership. It covered 23 miles during five lunar days of exploration, Tass said. The distance covered was 3.5 times greater than that of the original Lunokhod, which roved the Sea of Rains for 10 months during 1970 and 1971.

Mediterranean Pollution Talks On Today

BEIRUT — Scientists and officials from 150 cities bordering the Mediterranean will meet today to debate and draw up a charter protecting the sea from pollution. The aim of the three-day World Intercommunal Conference for protection of the Mediterranean from pollution will be to halt and reverse a trend that is gradually turning it into another Dead Sea, according to the organizers. Cities in 15 countries bordering the Mediterranean will be represented. More than 1,000 delegates have arrived in Beirut for the meeting, of-

Gunmen Kill Pair Visiting N. Irish Home

BELFAST — Gunmen burst into a home in Belfast's Old Park district Sunday, machine gunned a visiting Protestant man and woman to death and wounded their hostess in the arms and legs. Police said it was "another in the long line of motiveless murders." In Londonderry, hundreds of Provisional and Official Irish Republican Army (IRA) supporters clashed with troops late Sunday, police said. One soldier was slightly injured and a bomb was hurled at the troops who fired rubber bullets at the mob, police said.

Watergate Panel To Hear 4 Testify

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The tentative list of witnesses expected to begin testifying Tuesday when the Senate Watergate hearings resume: —Sally Jackson Harmony, former secretary to convicted Watergate conspirator G. Gordon Liddy, has acknowledged typing memos about telephone conversations obtained from the wiretaps at Democratic national headquarters and other intelligence sources which became part of the "Gemstone" file.

—H. A. Post, a Washington printer who prepared the supersecret "Gemstone" stationery ordered by Liddy. —Robert Reisner, 29, a former assistant to deputy campaign director Jeb Stuart Magruder and currently employed by the Office of Management and Budget, reportedly has told Senate investigators he saw the Gemstone file on Magruder's desk in a folder intended for former Attorney General John N. Mitchell.

—Liddy, 42, former White House consultant and counsel to the Finance Committee for the Re-election of the President, was convicted at the Watergate trial last January and he has refused since then to cooperate with federal or Senate Watergate investigators, even though he has been granted immunity.

...AND CALL GIRLS, TOO

United Press International Columnist Jack Anderson says former Attorney General John Mitchell told Senate investigators that call girls were hired by Watergate conspirator G. Gordon Liddy to gather information at the 1972 Democratic National Convention.

"Topping all the other tactics used against the Democrats in the 1972 campaign, call girls were recruited to romance Democratic leaders and, between kisses, to wheedle political secrets from them at their Miami convention," Anderson writes in his column for today.

Anderson says the Senate investigators "confirmed that call girls were recruited, but have been unable to determine whether they were actually used."

Ervin Hopes Hearings End This Month

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. (UPI) — Sen. Sam Ervin said Sunday Americans should not have to wait to find out the truth behind the "Watergate scandal" and said he "would hope" hearings could be completed this month with testimony by key White House aides.

Ervin, chairman of the Senate Watergate Committee, told a college graduating class here that he had denied a request by special prosecutor Archibald Cox to delay the hearings "because the American people are entitled to find out what actually happened without having to wait while justice travels on leaden feet."

SEN. SAM ERVIN JR.

Israel Trades POWs With Syria, Lebanon

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Israel Sunday returned 56 Syrian and Lebanese prisoners of war in exchange for three pilots held by Syria for more than three years in the biggest POW trade since immediately after the 1967 Middle East war.

The three pilots said later they were tortured and given substandard treatment during their imprisonment in Syria. Israel also released a leader of Druze, a non-Muslim Arab sect, from the occupied Golan Heights of Syria who was convicted of spying a year ago.

The exchange came just two days before the sixth anniversary of the war. The pilots, all captured after their planes were shot down in dogfights, were the only Israelis held by Syria, a command communiqué said. Three Israeli soldiers thrust flowers at them and kissed and hugged them as they crossed to Israeli territory.

Five Syrian officers, including a brigadier general, and two Lebanese officers were part of the exchange. All 56 Arabs were captured in Israeli raids into Lebanon and Syria in June and September, 1972, the command said. The International Red Cross (IRC) supervised the transfer, which a military spokesman said came after "a long process" of negotiations that started when Foreign Minister Abba Eban met with IRC officials in Geneva earlier this year.

FIREMEN FIGHT BLAZE ON CRIPPLED FREIGHTER Ship Rammed Oil Tanker In New York Harbor

Eighth Victim Found In Crash Of 2 Ships

NEW YORK (UPI) — Rescue workers searching the tanker Esso Brussels Sunday found an eighth victim of the fiery crash between the huge ship and a cargo freighter in New York Harbor.

Eight other crew members of both ships were missing and feared dead. The body, not immediately identified, was found in the aftersection of the tanker, which while riding at anchor, was rammed early Saturday by the container ship Sea Witch.

Among the dead was John L. Patterson, captain of the Sea Witch. A coroner said Sunday Patterson had a history of heart trouble and probably died as a result of shock.

The other six identified dead were from the Esso Brussels, as were seven of the missing. Tugs and fireboats rescued 63 crew members aboard the two vessels which had a total of 79 persons aboard them.

120-Mile Stormfront Hits Texas

By United Press International A band of thunderstorms 120 miles wide pummeled North Texas with tornadoes, hail and heavy rain Sunday. Two separate weather fronts carried severe thunderstorms and tornado-like winds into Ohio.

One twister caused heavy damage in Palestine, Tex., and hospitalized two persons. At least eight mobile homes and several houses were damaged and larger trees were torn down.

The worst damage in Ohio came in the Kent-Ravenna area, where a concrete company building was damaged and a church annex flattened by high winds.

The thunderstorms dumped more than five inches of rain in an hour on parts of Texas. The national weather bureau warned that the heavy rains, coming the second day in a row, probably would cause some flooding in the state's major rivers.

Marlin, Tex., was hit by more than a half foot of rain, hail three-quarters of an inch in diameter and a tornado. The twister destroyed seven barns, two houses and power lines, police said, but no injuries were reported.

More than a dozen funnel clouds and tornadoes were reported in northern Texas during the evening and tornado warnings were placed over 40 counties in the northeast section of the state.

The incident was classified by police as a residential burglary which resulted in a shooting. Officers did not reveal how the youth gained entrance to the Staring home.

MAGRUDER QUOTED

Nixon Made Major Campaign Decisions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former White House aide Jeb Stuart Magruder told a Harvard University political forum in January that President Nixon took part in day-to-day decisions for his 1972 re-election campaign, it has been reported.

Gary Hart, campaign manager for Democratic presidential candidate George S. McGovern, said he quoted Magruder's remark at the forum in a deposition Hart gave Friday in connection with a Nixon re-election campaign committee countersuit against the Democrats.

Magruder, who left the White House to become deputy manager of the Committee for the Re-election of the President, was quoted as saying the President was one of three persons who made the major campaign decisions. The others were identified as H. R. Haldeman, then White House chief of staff, and Nixon's campaign managers — first John N. Mitchell and then Clark MacGregor, who succeeded Mitchell in July, 1972.

Magruder said Mr. Nixon was personally involved in the day-to-day campaign decisions of the Republican campaign. Hart told reporters after he completed nearly four hours of testimony for the deposition. "He said Nixon, Haldeman and Mitchell, and later MacGregor, were the three people who made the decisions," Hart said. "Magruder said the basic campaign policies and major decision were made by the President, Haldeman and Mitchell, and later MacGregor."

Hart said he spoke for the Democratic campaign and Magruder for the Republicans among 16 participants in the Jan. 5-6 forum, sponsored jointly by Harvard University and the Nieman Foundation.

Hart said Magruder did not refer to any decisions involving the Watergate bugging or other political espionage activities.

Asked whether Magruder seemed to realize in January that his remarks might have significance in the Watergate scandal, Hart said the question of involvement by "higher-ups" was not as sensitive an issue then as it is now.

More About Airliner Crash

The nose of the plane smashed about a dozen houses in Goussainville, and an engine fell into the courtyard of the town hall. Another engine smashed a nursery school that was closed for the Sunday holiday. Pieces of the fuselage, passenger seats and other pieces of the plane covered a mile-square area.

Air show sources said there was no immediate indication of the cause of the crash, but Soviet aviation leaders started an immediate investigation.

The official Soviet news agency, Tass, reported the crash in a five-line dispatch filed from Moscow six hours after it occurred. "The causes of the crash are being investigated," Tass said.

Tupolev and Soviet Aviation Minister Pyotr V. Demtchov, who also was attending the show, flew by helicopter to the crash area.

The crash of the Tupolev 144 was a new setback in development of the plane and the sixth crash of a Soviet commercial airliner within the past 10 months. In the five previous crashes, involving Ilyushin and subsonic Tupolev aircraft, 513 persons were killed.

The plane that crashed Sunday was not the prototype of the TU144 that in 1968 became the first of such civil aviation aircraft to break the sound barrier, but it was the first production model scheduled to go into commercial service in the Aeroflot line late next year.

The plane originally was announced ready to go into commercial service in 1972, but it was withheld for reasons never explained by Soviet officials.

Western aviation design has long suspected that causes and mechanical flaws have blocked smooth progress of the TU144 into passenger service. In 1971, Western mechanics in Warsaw reported that the TU144 had structural cracks when it landed there en route home from the 1971 Paris air show. Aeroflot spokesmen denied at that time that anything was amiss. But last year there was a design alteration in which small, retractable wings were added on the nose to improve takeoff and landing performance.

Soviet Superjet First Supersonic Plane To Fly

MOSCOW (UPI) — The crash of the Soviet Tupolev 144 supersonic airliner Sunday at the Paris air show was the first tragedy on the path toward development of a commercial plane to carry passengers faster than the speed of sound.

The prototype of the Soviet TU144 was the first of such planes to fly. It made its debut Dec. 31, 1968, one month before the Anglo-French Concorde first soared into the air. The crash Sunday also was a first for the supersonic plane.

The TU144 is due to begin commercial service late next year and is already in serial production, according to Soviet aviation officials.

On June 5, 1969, six months after its maiden flight, it became the first aircraft designed for commercial passengers to break the sound barrier. Since then, it has flown at twice the speed of sound.

The TU144 was the crowning achievement of the late Andrei Tupolev, founder of the Soviet Union's domestic aircraft industry, and his son, Alexei, who now heads the Tupolev design bureau.

Alexei Tupolev said at the 1971 Paris air show that the TU144 had reached a speed of 1,526 miles per hour and would eventually carry 124 passengers a distance of 4,000 miles at a top speed of 1,862 miles per hour.

More About Ex-POW (Continued From Page A1) life with their families, he said, "but we expect a period at home to do away with these."

Willbur also said Pentagon counselors would try to remain in close contact with individual returnees and their families for at least five years to reduce the incidence of accidents, suicides and homicides common among former POW's in previous wars.

Car Hits Girl Playing In Yard SANTA ANA — Ernestina Medina, 11, of 1402 W. Cubbon St., suffered leg and hip injuries Sunday noon when a car struck her while she was playing alone in the front yard at home, police reported. The driver fled on foot. Investigators said Ernestina was admitted to Riverview Community Hospital.

The car went out of control, over the curb, struck the child, knocked down a tree and hit the Medina residence, police said. Police impounded the car which, they said, had not been reported stolen.

Placentia OKs Computer Bid PLACENTIA—Trustees of the Placentia Unified School District this week unanimously voted to accept the low bid of $68,250 for the purchase of an electronic computer system from Data Automation Services, Inc., a Texas-based firm.

Dr. John Mullender, director of business services, said the district received only one valid bid on the system because the 1401 computer system was not in large supply when the bid was advertised. However, he told trustees he thought the $68,000 price was a good one because the system sells new for almost $400,000. The computer, to be used for data processing, will be installed in a vacant classroom in June and moved to a permanent site later.

New Pesticide Curbs Proposed

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti Sunday unveiled sweeping legislation imposing "environmentally sensible, agriculturally sound" controls on the use of pesticides in California.

"Our pesticide laws are filled with loopholes and deficiencies that endanger the health of the general population as well as the farmers and workers who harvest crops," the Van Nuys Democrat declared.

"Not only are many private applicators unregulated," Moretti said, "but the current laws exempt applicators who work for public agencies from meeting any examination or competence requirements."

Moretti's legislative package contains 15 different bills, authored by Republicans and Democrats, representing both rural and urban communities. The measures will be formally introduced today.

One bill proposed by Assemblywoman March Fong, D-Oakland, is designed to prevent future contamination of produce on grocery shelves. She noted that 8,000 cases of lettuce contaminated with Monitor 4 reached markets earlier this year before they were quarantined and destroyed.

Other measures affect pesticide reporting and monitoring, research into pesticides and farmworker safety, pesticide residue levels and the use of pesticides by public employees. One bill increases enforcement of pesticide laws and regulations.

Moretti noted that the Fleming Memorial Poison Information Center in Los Angeles—one of eight such California centers—reported 4,156 pesticide related injuries, all of which were in urban or suburban areas.

Moretti said the bills "are environmentally sensible, agriculturally sound, and in the interest of farmworkers, growers and home gardeners."

BIPARTISAN GROUP SAYS 33% Of Congressmen Have Outside Income

WASHINGTON (UPI) — More than a third of the members of the House—170 out of 433—have outside income-producing business or professional ties, The National Committee for an Effective Congress (NCEC) said Saturday.

The NCEC, a nonprofit bipartisan organization, based its information on reports submitted to the House Ethics Committee by the legislators themselves. House members are required to file reports disclosing specific financial, business and professional incomes by April 30 of each year.

The NCEC said that it was important to note that the overwhelming majority of non-freshmen congressmen have no professional or managerial business affiliations beyond their $42,500-a-year legislative salary.

"Undoubtedly, many of these men and women have conscientiously and deliberately avoided any outside relationship which gives rise to real or potential conflicts of interest, or even to the appearance of such possible conflict," the committee said.

"If this has meant financial hardship, it seems to have been more than offset by the desire to preserve the integrity of public office and to assure the

Police Watch Heist, Nab 3

ANAHEIM—Police watched Saturday night as three men held up a motel manager in his office at 1735 S. Harbor Blvd., and arrested the trio outside the building.

The three men, booked on suspicion of armed robbery, were identified by police as Forest Lee Gipson, 20, and Henry Robert Ridge, 21, both of Inglewood, and Richard Earl Gipson, 28, Los Angeles.

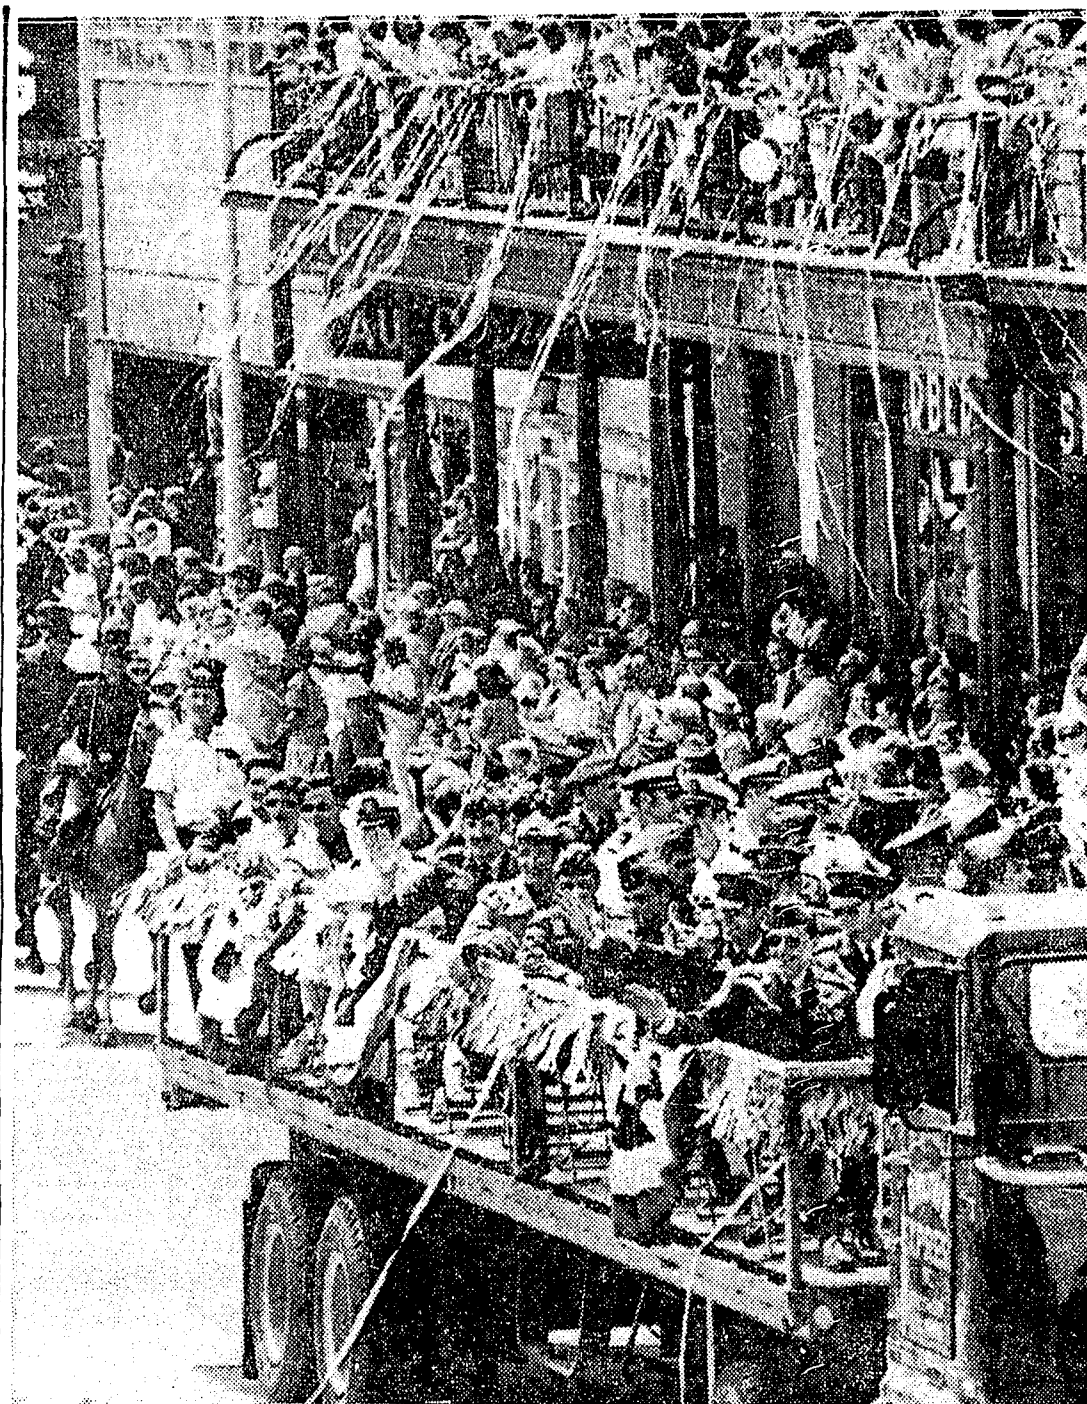

Officers said a pistol and a knife and money taken at the motel and at another motel robbery within the hour at 1126 W. Katella Ave., were recovered from the trio.

The NCEC said Rep. James M. Collins, R-Tex., had the most connections, receiving income from six farms and affiliations from two real estate firms.

Rep. James H. Quillen listed income from two businesses, two real estate and insurance agencies and one bank, it said.

Listing as many as four outside incomes were Reps. Robert B. Mathias, R-Calif.; Sam Hanna, D-Calif.; Peter H. Frelinghuysen, R-N.J.; and Peter A. Peyser, R-N.Y.

Russell D. Hemenway, NCEC director, said in a statement accompanying the report that "if Watergate has taught us one thing, it is that secrecy has no place in public affairs."

GALA SALUTE TO EX-POWS — A cheering crowd in Dallas paid tribute to former Vietnam War prisoners. They were guests of the city for weekend festivities, which began with a ticker tape parade, and ended with a gala rally Saturday night at the Cotton Bowl. The affair was sponsored by 23 Dallas businessmen, led by computer magnate H. Ross Perot and soft drink millionaire W. W. Clements. Former Governor John Connally, currently an advisor to President Nixon, thanked the assembled POWs and all servicemen for their sacrifices. Bob Hope was master of ceremonies.

Man On $100 Bill Spree Surprised At Publicity

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — Millionaire Stuart Holzman was back at the elegant Le Club Internationale Sunday, surprised at the publicity generated when he sped off to the Bahamas from Fort Lauderdale marina Friday tossing $100 bills into the water.

Insisting that he was not a publicity seeker, Holzman, 45, declined to give any explanation for his whimsical behavior. He went to the marina Friday with three pretty women in tow, paid $45,000 in cash for three sleek speedboats, then left for Bimini scattering the bills in the intracoastal waterway. Several startled fishermen leaped into the water to recover the money.

Holzman, who returned during the weekend, said he considered himself a rich man with pretty-level-headed goals for a man of his means.

"I'm a staunch Republican," he added.

At age 35 he inherited about $50 million from an uncle in New Brunswick, N.J., but the uncle said he must spend time as a common workingman. So Holzman drove a bus for 10 years.

Now at age 45, he says he owns a $1.7 million jet, businesses in South America and Florida and enjoys hobnobbing with the wealthy set.

At Le Club Internationale Sunday, where Holzman likes to spend his time, he arrived in a pickup truck wearing a work shirt.

The club is currently organizing a Fort Lauderdale-to-Bahamas balloon race to raise money for a charity, and Holzman announced he would match the largest donation for the benefit.

"I want to do more to help children," he said.

Here Rolls The Bride, On Skates

Cathy Hayes and Harry Sewell were married Sunday at the Red Barn Roller Drome.

The bride was given away by Dick Davis, owner of the rink. He skated her down the 180 foot makeshift aisle.

Honeymoon plans were kept secret, but the couple said it would include plenty of skating.

Body Of Youth May Be 7th In Killings

CUMBERLAND, Md. (UPI)—State police announced Sunday they believe they have found the body of a young man believed to be the seventh victim of last month's killing spree that also took six lives in Donaldsonville, Ga.

The body, which was found in Allegany County about 10 miles from the town of Flintstone, near the Pennsylvania border, was tentatively identified as that of 19-year-old Richard Miller.

The youth, from McConnellsburg, Pa., was last seen alive May 10, when he chased four men who stole a pickup truck near his home.

Wayne Coleman, one of the accused killers of the rural Georgia farming family, was reported to have told authorities after his capture that his cohorts had kidnaped Miller, shot him and dumped his body near a sign reading, "Welcome to Maryland."

The body was taken to a Cumberland hospital for an autopsy.

Weekly Senate Quiz Of Cabinet Sought

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Cabinet members and the heads of other agencies would be asked to appear before the entire Senate to reply to written and oral questions during a two-hour period every week under a bill to be introduced today in the Senate.

Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., its sponsor, said his proposal was first offered by the late Sen. Estes Kefauver, D-Tenn. It appears to be modeled after the "question period" in the British and other parliaments during which government ministers, who are also members of parliament, must submit to questions from the opposition party.

Mondale said his plan would not alter the constitutional doctrine of separation of powers since appearances would not be compelled.

"The events surrounding the Watergate affair have revealed the dangers inherent in the ability of a few men on the White House staff—responsible to no one, mostly without the sobering experience of electoral politics and beyond the reach of Congress—to control policy," he said in a statement.

Under existing practice, congressional committees have little trouble forcing officials to appear before them for questioning. If they refuse to come voluntarily, they can be subpoenaed.

Under Mondale's bill, the heads of departments and agencies would be asked to appear when the question period took up their area of jurisdiction. Questions would be screened by the Senate committee having jurisdiction over the subject matter but oral questions, if germane to the written questions, could be asked later.

Gas Lack 'Contrived,' Senator Tells Nixon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., charged Sunday that major oil companies have "artificially contrived" the oil and gas shortage by deliberately withholding crude oil supplies from midwest independent refineries.

Abourezk also maintained that the fuel oil shortage experienced this past winter was "contrived."

Police 'Rescue' Wedding, Host Happy Couple

PASADENA, (UPI) — The night shift at the police station toasted John and Kathy, a pair of newlyweds married in the chief's office Saturday night following a frantic search for a missing preacher.

When John Zaita, 26, and Kathy Wilcox, 20, turned up at a private chapel for their wedding ceremony, the preacher failed to keep the appointment and the young couple filed a missing persons report.

Hours later The Rev. Tom Hubbard was finally found and rushed to police headquarters, where the service was performed. The officers assembled in the chief's office and presented the Zaitas with a bottle of champagne.

"These guys made me one of the happiest people alive—and my wife, too," the bridegroom said.

Abourezk, in a letter to President Nixon, called for immediate investigation by the Justice Department for anti-trust violations.

"I am convinced that the present shortage of fuel supply for the Midwest is artificially contrived to force the independent sector of the industry out of business and to get a price increase," he said.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., raised similar questions Friday in a letter asking the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) to report promptly on the situation.

Jackson asked FTC Chairman Lewis A. Engman to supply a report in 30 days on whether the major companies are engaged in a conspiracy to seize monopolistic control of the oil market.

"I want action," Jackson wrote. "We've waited too

Customers Pay 91c A Gallon

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — When his supply of gas dwindled to 200 gallons, service station owner Ken Yano hiked his prices—to 90.9 cents a gallon for premium and 85.9 cents for regular. And had some takers.

He said he'd rather charge outrageous prices than run out of gas.

Yano raised his prices after closing down for three days last week because he was out of gasoline and being told by Mobil that he was being rationed—90 per cent of last year's gas and only 8,600 gallons at a time.

FOR YABLONSKI SLAYINGS

Ex-UMW Secretary Faces Trial

ERIE, Pa. (UPI) — Former United Mine Workers official Albert Pass faces trial Monday for the contract murder of union dissident Joseph A. "Jock" Yablonski with five of the six prior murder defendants prepared to testify against him.

A panel of 250 veniremen was drawn for jury selection, expected to require a week, in the courtroom of Erie County Judge Edward H. Carney.

Pass, 52, a former District 19 financial secretary from Middletown, Ky., has maintained his innocence despite a statement by alleged co-conspirator William Prater, which reportedly named him as financier in the death plot.

Prater was convicted last March 26 on three counts of first degree murder for the deaths of Yablonski, his wife and daughter, at their Clarksburg, Pa., home on New Year's Eve, 1969.

Yablonski was slain three weeks after losing a violence-marred union presidential election to W. A. "Tony" Boyle. Special prosecutor Richard Sprague has charged that Boyle prompted the killings, but sources said the Prater statement provided no link to Boyle.

Both Pass and Boyle, recently deposed as UMW president, have denied any involvement in the murders.

Although Pass is the last indicted suspect facing trial, Sprague has promised to make further arrests in the case, UMW local president Silas Huddleston, of LaFollette, Tenn., the first person to link the slayings to Pass and Prater, a District 19 field representative. Huddleston said he acted as a money-carrier between the officials and the hired killers, including his son-in-law, Paul Gilly.

Sprague charged the money was provided by Boyle and strained through a District 19 organizing committee. Several committee members testified they kicked back expense checks to Pass and Prater and lied before investigating grand juries at their request.

Boyle testified at Prater's trial the money was intended for organizing. There were indications he would not appear as a witness in the Pass trial.

'Free Spending' Power Allocated From $27 Million Contingency Funds

Editor's Note: This is the first of four articles on the use of contingency funds—money allocated to the legislature and governor without question.

By DONALD H. HARRISON and OTTO KREISHER Copley News Service

SACRAMENTO—A handful of men in the legislature and the governor's office control more than $27 million in taxpayers' money, and have the power to spend it in whatever manner they see fit.

The money is allocated to them without question, and they are directly accountable to no one.

A recent example was a decision by the Assembly Rules Committee to spend $3 million for the development of a steam-powered automobile, without ever asking the legislature to vote on the question of whether the state should get into that business.

The seven-member committee has control over nearly half the money that may be spent for unspecified purposes by the legislature and the governor's office.

The five-member Senate Rules Committee has jurisdiction over the next sizable amount, followed by chairmen of Assembly-Senate joint committees and by the governor's office.

By long standing tacit agreement, the governor permits the legislature to appropriate for itself whatever amount of money its leaders determine is necessary to run its operations. The legislature returns the favor to the governor.

A look at the state's $9.4 billion budget, as proposed by the state Assembly, illustrates the process.

Choosing an item at random: The governor asked the legislature for $1.2 million for an educational liaison office in the Health and Welfare Agency. The figure was slashed to only $71,376 by the Assembly Ways and Means Committee.

By contrast, the governor's request for money to operate his own office went unscathed by the Assembly budget makers. He asked for $2.1 million "for support of governor and of governor's office," and he got it. He asked for $15,000 for "special contingent expenses" and he got it.

The two houses of the legislature, in turn, told the governor's budget makers what it would need. "For contingent expenses of the Assembly" the governor allocated $12.8 million. "For contingent expenses of the Senate," he allotted $8.9 million.

"For the expenses of joint committees and their members," he set aside $3.8 million.

How did this "hands off the other fellow's money" policy get started?

Spokesmen for the governor and the legislature say it is rooted in the doctrine of separation of powers. Were there no such tacit understanding, in their view, chaos would result.

Were the governor to give the legislature less than it wanted, the legislature would simply add the money. Were the governor to "blue pencil" the addition, the legislature would override the veto.

On the other hand, were the legislature to cut the appropriation for the governor's office, he could retaliate by lowering the legislature's appropriation. The whole process could go on indefinitely, possibly with neither branch of government ultimately able to win the funds it considers necessary to operate.

The "you don't rock my money boat; I won't rock your money boat" process has been going on for years, but the announcement of the Assembly contract for development of a steam car has prompted scrutiny of the whole process.

Cornelius Dutcher, president of the Steam Power Systems, Inc., of La Jolla, said the decision to use Assembly funds for the steam power project was made by Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti.

Dutcher said he and Moretti met over lunch in Sacramento and he asked the Van Nuys Democrat if the state might be interested in funding the project.

Dutcher and Moretti were greatly interested, and at first considered introducing a bill to that effect. But Moretti decided a bill's chance for passage would not be good, Dutcher said, and that utilizing the Assembly contingent fund might be more appropriate.

This version was corroborated by Jim Lane, an Assembly consultant, in a press interview last January, shortly after announcement of the $3 million spending program. Lane said then that it would be "much more arduous" to follow the usual legislative route than to simply obtain the approval of the Assembly Rules Committee.

Gov. Ronald Reagan's administration "was not really very enthusiastic" about the steam car project, Lane added. If the project were authorized by an ordinary bill, Reagan would not have had the option of vetoing it.

At a press conference later, Reagan was asked what he thought about such an "end run." The governor replied: "Well the legislature has the authority to use its contingency fund for things of this kind. Certainly there is no question about the interest of California in nonpolluting sources of power, but something I suggest you take up with the legislature (is) whether they are all in agreement that that is a proper use of the money."

Assemblyman John Burton, D-San Francisco, chairman of the contingent fund-controlling Assembly Rules Committee, was asked that question in an interview.

He said the Assembly contingent funds could be used for anything that serves a "legitimate legislative purpose."

Burton did say, however, that the contract for the steam cars was out of the ordinary. He said it would never have been entered into if the Assembly had not engaged in a previous project for the development of a steam bus.

The steam bus project was financed by the federal Department of Transportation, but administered by the Assembly. Over the years, the Assembly spent about $50,000 of its funds overseeing the multimillion-dollar project, the Assembly's fiscal officer Al Monaghan recalled.

Burton was asked if any pet project of an important legislator could receive Assembly Rules Committee approval in lieu of the "more arduous" process of having a bill enacted. "I don't think so," Burton replied. "This was something the Assembly had experience in. It was approved by a unanimous vote of the Rules Committee—four Democrats and three Republicans."

Burton said the steam car contract was a one-of-a-kind situation. To prove it, he offered to provide Copley News Service a complete accounting of how the money was used, an unprecedented offer. No accounting of the funds has ever been made public.

The appropriation for the fiscal year ending June 30, Burton said, was $12.3 million. From the year before, the contingent fund had $4 million left over, making the total available to the Assembly Rules Committee this year $16.3 million.

Here are Burton's figures on how the $16.3 million will have been spent by June 30. The calculations were done by Monaghan, the fiscal officer.

For salaries of secretaries and other personnel (not including legislators who are paid out of a separate fund): $8.3 million.

WORRY CLINIC

By George W. Crane, Ph.D., M.D.

Editor Bob is an experienced journalist who has acquired a vast knowledge of practical psychology. Like Mr. Hearst, he knows that talk-up is a superb form of advertising. It zooms sales, whether of commercial goods or newspapers. Controversy fills stadiums!

CASE X-525: Bob P., aged 55, is a lifelong newspaper editor. "Dr. Crane," he smiled, "take a look at this letter I received from one of your avid followers."

"Wouldn't you say she rarely misses reading one of your columns?"

Her letter is a fascinating evidence of how well newspapers can stir up wholesome debate and controversy.

Remember, too, that it is controversy that fills football stadiums, baseball parks and boxing arenas!

So a newspaper that fails to evoke redhot letters, pro and con, is not going to produce the talk-up that is the usual form of superb advertising.

Here's this lady's letter:

"How much longer will women be insulted by that crackpot, Dr. George W. Crane?" she began.

"He is obviously obsessed with sex!"

"But sex is NOT the greatest cause of divorce, for money is!"

"Dr. Crane licentiously describes the boudoir and urges us wives to stress 'boudoir cheesecake,' with gossamer nighties!"

"He seems to think woman's chief goal in life is to catch and then hold on to her man, as if the adult male is some sort of precious jewel!"

"And he insults all womankind by suggesting that Women's Libbers are either unmarried (& would end their nonsense if they had a husband).

"Or such women must be masculine or lesbians or sexually unsatisfied wives."

AN EDITOR'S TEST

This type of redhot letter offers a quick test of an editor's journalistic experience.

For seasoned journalists relish this type of missive, since it is as good an indication of avid reader interest as any poll by Dr. Gallup, Harris et al.

But some younger editors, just out of journalism school, don't realize that such apparently critical letters are really a boost for circulation.

For such a writer as this lady will pour out her gripes at bridge parties, church Women's Societies and the Country Club.

The resulting talk-up then will provoke superb controversy, with the local newspaper gaining the spotlight thereby.

One of America's pioneer newspaper Applied Psychologists was William R. Hearst, Sr.

"Dr. Crane," he once told me, "I'd advise you to 'needle' readers unmercifully to wake them up."

"So why don't you pick on the soporific clergymen who empty churches by their dull sermonizing?"

"And attack the lazy teachers who wish to coast on mediocre output just because they have 'tenure' and thus can't be fired for anything less than moral turpitude."

"But especially pick on the fat, stodgy wives who rebuff their mates, thus driving the latter into the arms of paramours."

"For then these irate readers will talk-up our newspapers and write scathing letters to the editor."

"We'll print them and thus promote a furious pro and con debate."

"It will soon become the best read page of our entire paper."

Older editors realize the wisdom in Mr. Hearst's suggestions but many young editors take such letters at face value and get scared.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, JUNE 5

Your birthday today: What seems an overconfident, expansive dream can become reality this year with work and prayer. What you do tends to bring more reaction than normal. Today's natives have lively imaginations, may follow varied vocations.

Aries (March 21 - April 19): Today's ventures should be designed for long-term success. Familiar contacts deepen into more meaningful relationships.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Domestic concerns can be settled with sensible, simple changes. Home arrangements needn't stay on the same schedule.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Make this day a vacation from your usual daily living, if only in spirit. A token of your feelings means much to loved ones.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Speak up, claim your own today. Together with others of like mind you can overcome limitations of local conditions.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): The way is open before you. Express yourself firmly, proceed vigorously. Others will follow, a few will copy.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22):

Rather than coaxing others into your affairs, simply tend them quietly. Get details clearly established.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Career interests expand swiftly; hopefully you're prepared. Don't hesitate to be conspicuous today.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Satisfaction and awareness of what's happening don't arrive until some later time when conditions settle a bit.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Go into details; you could overlook one which changes the whole picture. Postpone travel except for fact-finding trips.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): All is not profitable that sounds as if it is. Above-board transactions with witnesses are preferred.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): It's time for learning complex and elusive arts, listening rather than offering advice. Cooperate with young people.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Home and family affairs continue to conflict with career demands. Find extra time by starting early.

Mariner To Seek Mercury's Clues

NASA will attempt the first exploration of Mercury in March, 1974, when the Mariner spacecraft will come within 635 miles of the planet.

The television cameras will take pictures and six other scientific experiments will send back information to earth to try to answer such questions as what is the shape of the planet and why does it rotate so slowly, turning only once every 59 days.

If your birthday or anniversary takes place before June 20, we will give you a 4-course banquet, a celebration cake and a present completely free of charge, at 1520 A.D., the English Theatre Restaurant you've seen in Time Magazine and TV News.

semblymen's autos: $60,000.
For contracts, including $500,000 for the first phase of the steam car development project: $700,000.
For automobile rentals for as-semblymen: $300,000.
For travel: $300,000.
For telephones: $800,000.
For rent: (district offices):
$500,000.
For postage: $900,000.
For building equipment and furniture: $300,000.
For employees payroll contributions: $800,000.
For miscellaneous expenses
$100,000.

Total expenditures, by that estimate, would leave the Assembly Rules Committee approximately $2.8 million to carry into the next fiscal year. Added to the budget request for the next fiscal year, it means $15.6 million will be available to the Assembly Rules Committee in fiscal 1973.

City Urged To Ask County Park Funds

SAN CLEMENTE—Councilman Thomas O'Keefe urged the city during a joint study session of city council and city commissions to apply for a share of some $10 million the county has available for parks acquisition and development.

O'Keefe said the funds, received by the county under the federal revenue sharing program, are available to cities on a matching fund basis for parks that would serve the entire county.

A member of the county parks and recreation commission, O'Keefe said no projects have been applied for in the south Orange Coast area.

From his experience, he said, the city's beaches, which are visited largely by out-of-town people, would "definitely qualify." He picked the beach at the foot of Camino Capistrano as a particularly worthwhile project, since it is "one of the few remaining undeveloped areas."

The first $2 million have been allocated, O'Keefe said, but there will be funds available periodically and the earlier applications are filed, the better chances the city will have of being considered.

6% Jobless Cities Down By 1

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The number of major cities with unemployment of 6 per cent or more declined by one in May to 37, lowest in 29 months, the Labor Department reported Sunday.
Removed from the list was the Wilkes-Barre and Hazleton, Pa. metropolitan area.
The announcement came two days after the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics reported that unemployment across the nation hung at 5 per cent in May, virtually unchanged from the level at the start of the year despite the economic boom.

In Sunday's report, the Labor Department's Manpower Administration said the number of smaller cities with "substantial unemployment" of at least 6 per cent also declined by nine last month to 794, the lowest total in 19 months.
One smaller area, Tiptonville, Tenn., was added to the list, but ten others were dropped as their unemployment rates fell below 6 per cent. They were Greensboro, Ala.; Malvern, Ark.; Carlsbad and Santa Fe, N.M.; Williamsport and Sayre, Athens-Towanda, Pa.; Parsons, Kansas; Vernal and Provo, Utah; and Drakes Branch, Va.
The 37 major cities on the substantial unemployment list in May was the lowest number since December, 1970, when there were also 37. A high in recent years of 65 was reached in October, 1971.

WELFARE PROGRAM FALLS SHORT

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — administration, a federal review team has found. Gov. Ronald Reagan's "work or else" welfare program has fallen far short of the expectations" announced by his welfare recipients who took part in job training in the first eight months ultimately found work to remove them from relief rolls.

"Most of the assignments are menial, and little training or supervision is provided," the investigators said in the report.

The review was conducted from July, 1972, through February, 1973, by the San Francisco regional office of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW). The study also said the welfare caseload went up during the eight-month period.

Irvine Jewish Families Slate Shavu'ot Eve

IRVINE—Israel Academy will mark the first year of its existence as a cooperative learning community of Jewish families at Shavu'ot eve services Tuesday evening in Multi-Room C at University High School, Culver Road at Campus. The 8 p.m. service will revive the Biblical Festival of First Fruits, also known as Pentecost because it comes 50 days after the start of Passover. All branches of Israel Academy, as well as families and individuals, will bring the fruits of their first year of activity—crafts projects and class achievements. Members of Hebrew class will read a short story they wrote in Hebrew. The Hebrew High School will demonstrate its last unit on basketball vocabulary. The Macabbee Sports Fellowship will reenact their participation in the Walkathon for Soviet Jews. Mahol will bring the offering of its folk dance.

Since Shavu'ot, in Jewish tradition, also marks the anniversary of the Covenant at Sinai, the academy and its families will reconsecrate themselves to that ancient covenant, as well as the Israel Academy Covenant, adopted and signed on the charter cruise last August. The academy was founded a day after Shavu'ot-in May, 1972. Its handful of families have grown to 62.

The academy, which meets regularly at University High, seeks to reestablish the Jewish family as the learning and observing unit and as the vehicle for transmission of Jewish values. It is a cooperative, requiring the adult members of its families to earn at least six credits a year in learning, activity and service.

"I concentrate on new dentures at prices you can afford"

What you can't afford is to be without them.

Dr. F. E. Campbell

Why I can offer new dentures at such reasonable prices: Of all our services, the basic and most important one is making new dentures. We do all our own work in our own modern laboratories. With the popularity of my INSTANT CREDIT PLAN—I can deliver new dentures at prices you can afford.

Instant Credit Makes it Easy. Older people often face a different kind of credit problem than younger ones. I understand your credit problems. I carry my own credit, so I can make my own decision on your credit INSTANTLY. No waiting for an answer. No banks or finance companies to deal with. Many of my patients work part time, are on Social Security, a small pension or retired. Whatever your circumstances, I tailor the terms to fit them—on approval of your credit—even if you earn UNDER $200 a month, even if you've never had credit before.

Extra work? No extra charge. Even though we never know in advance how much time and work your new dentures may take—you always know in advance how much they'll cost. Exactly. We never charge extra for difficult cases. All work in our labs by union technicians.

One Day Service. Usually, if you come in to our downtown L.A. office by 9:30 A.M.—your dentures can be ready the same day—a real advantage for out-of-towners.

Fast Plate Repairs in all 12 offices. Usually...while you wait.

Union Members. All union and insurance dental care plans welcome. Bring your I.D. card. We do the rest.

Any questions? We'll gladly answer them in detail. Come in anytime or phone the office nearest you. No appointment necessary for examination.

EX-PENTAGON AIDE CHARGES VOLUNTEER ARMY 'SABOTAGE'

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The architect of the all-volunteer military concept charged Sunday that opponents in the Pentagon are ready to sabotage the system and force a return to the draft.

Roger T. Kelley, who has left as assistant defense secretary for manpower, talked with UPI as he cleaned out his office and prepared to return to his old job as head of personnel for the Caterpillar Tractor Company in Peoria, Ill.

The draft was suspended at the end of December and the all-volunteer system is to begin on July 1.
"As I leave I am very sensitive that some are reacting to my departure and the danger signal to my successor," he said.

NAMES IN THE NEWS

Break-In Of Strauss' Home Probed By FBI

Democratic National Chairman Robert Strauss said Sunday the FBI has started an investigation to see if there is any link between the break-in at his home in Dallas last year and the Watergate scheme. Strauss, in Stateline, Nev., to attend the National Governors Conference, told newsmen his home was broken into by what appeared to be professionals shortly before the Democratic convention last July. He said his home was "rifled" but no money, jewelry, furniture or silverware was taken.

Juan D. Peron announced through a spokesman Sunday he will end 18 years in exile from Argentina June 21 and return to his homeland, where his followers control the government for the first time since his ouster as president in 1955. It was also announced Argentina's new Peronist president, Hector J. Campora, would fly to Madrid to accompany Peron home.

Fulfilling a pledge made by her late husband to speak at the University of Virginia commencement, Lady Bird Johnson Sunday stressed individual action and faith in the future as the keys to happiness in later life. "A cleaner neighborhood begins at your own door," she said. "A better government begins with your own vote. I don't believe talk of a new doomsday destiny," she said.

VITAMIN VILLAGE

SUNBURN?!

Be careful! This is the season for most people's first venture of the year out into the sun, and it is all too easy to burn your soft and tender, lily-white skin to a well-known, lobster-red crisp! Take Care!

That extra measure of protection against blistering and peeling and PAIN is our Vitamin E Oil. We carry a huge selection of outstanding sun-tanning lotions and oils, for every type of skin, to use when you are outside in the sun. However, when you come inside out of the sun, that's when you want to really saturate your skin (all over your whole body) with VITAMIN E OIL.

Use it lavishly! You'll love it!

Doctor Says

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—Your series on low blood sugar was great. Your suggestion about adding roughage to the meals was unknown to me but seems to be a real help.

Sometime when you're discussing it I wish you would consider the fact that some of these people with low blood sugar have a genuine intolerance for certain protein foods especially. Not all but some. Do you find this to be true and is it related to the general picture or just a second complicating condition that one sees at times with the hypoglycemia? The intolerances are usually multiple and include milk, cereals, legumes, etc.

Dear Reader—I receive a number of good letters from doctors, such as yourself. They contain important public information. I hope to include such information from other doctors when possible.

It's certainly true that some of the people who suffer from low blood sugar attacks do not tolerate other foods well. Many of these people have multiple problems in absorption from the digestive tract. This can affect milk tolerance, particularly if they have trouble splitting and absorbing the double milk sugar lactose. It might be difficult to establish that this was due to the proteins in some of the foods or whether they were associated with other elements that are common in certain protein foods such as the milk sugar in milk. It is also true that some people don't tolerate soybean and soybean products well and find them to be gas formers.

Some individuals who have low blood sugar also have stomach acidity with their attacks and generalized digestive complaints. As an initial approach, eliminating sweets, and in severe cases eliminating milk and cereals (both of which are sometimes troublesome in terms of absorption and digestion) and sticking to lean meats, poultry, fish, and natural vegetables with plenty of roughage is helpful. After the problem has been controlled, by individual experimentation one can find what foods are best tolerated. Some individuals who do not tolerate cereals may have some intolerance to the gluten protein common in all cereals except rice and corn.

Dear Dr. Lamb—I'm a 16-year-old female and have syphilis. I'm having treatment, and also started work at a V.D. clinic. The reason I'm writing is because there are hundreds of people who have V.D. and don't know it. I would like to say if you think you might have V.D. go to your doctor, or better, go to a V.D. clinic, there are a lot of them. Venereal disease doesn't just get teens. V.D. doesn't play favorites. V.D. can infect at any age. The youngest person in our clinic was 11 and the oldest was 53. I read an article about an 80-year-old man who got syphilis. If you're over 30 don't think you can't get V.D., because you can.

Please print this letter because I want everybody to know about this disease.

Dear Reader—Thank you for trying to help other people. You're absolutely right V.D. does not play favorites in terms of age, religion, sex, race, wealth or social position. Having intimate relations with others, regardless of their social standing or other aspects, raises the possibility of venereal disease, unless both partners are free of disease and are not engaging in activities with anyone else. I also agree with your recommendation that anyone who has any reason to think they might have venereal disease should seek an examination from a V.D. clinic or through the county or city health office.

Anaheim Church Plans Dinner Dance

GRECIAN HOLIDAY—Ernest Chiacos adjusts a poster of Greece as his wife, center, and Mrs. Thomas J. Roper, Jr. share a pictorial essay of that country. The interest in Greece is all due to St. John the Baptist Greek Orthodox Church of Anaheim's annual building fund benefit dinner dance. First prize of the evening is a round trip for two to Athens. The event, which takes place Saturday, June 9, at 7 p.m. in the Magnolia Room of the Disneyland Hotel, also features as door prizes trips to Acapulco and Hawaii. Entertainment for the evening will be provided by the Dan Greeban Trio and the Hellenic Sounds. Additional information may be obtained by calling Chiacos, Tustin or the church office.

Dicken's Descendant Carries On Literary Tradition Of Family

By KRISTI WITKER
Women's News Service

NEW YORK (WNS) — In this day of broken traditions it's always refreshing to see one perpetuated, and Mary Danby, a great-great-granddaughter of Charles Dickens is doing just that with the publication of her first novel, "A Single Girl."

"When we were children we were never allowed to forget our family's literary background," says the pretty long-haired brunette in her lilting English accent. Mary, who was born and raised in the London suburb of Wimbledon, vividly remembers the famous Dickens desk which her grandparents (Mary's grandfather was Charles Dickens' grandson) kept in their English home.

"It was set off by itself in a corner with a dressing gown pulled across the chair seat to keep us away — rather like a museum — but of course that didn't stop us. I used to climb up on the chair and sit there with my arms folded on the desk, feet dangling well above the floor, waiting for inspiration. Unfortunately none came at that time!"

Mary was also reminded of Dickens by the existence of the Dickens Fellowship — "largely composed of nice old ladies who meet periodically and give toasts to the immortal memory — and there's also the Dickens Museum. So you see, in England, it's rather hard for us to forget him."

But it wasn't Charles Dickens who first inspired Mary, now thirty-two, to write. It was her aunt, Monica Dickens, who had once worked as a cook in some of the wealthiest homes in London. Monica had talked with a book publisher, hoping to sell him an idea for a cookbook based on recipes she served in those estates, but instead, the publisher had convinced her to write about something far tastier than the food — the people themselves and their private lives.

"In three weeks Aunt Monica wrote down everything she could remember in some Woolworth's note pads," Mary recalls, "and the publisher was thrilled." The book that resulted, One Pair of Hands, became a best seller.

One evening, four years ago, Mary happened to join her aunt and the publisher for dinner, during which she told him about some of her more peculiar jobs. The next day the publisher asked Mary for lunch. "I want you to write a book," he said. So she did.

In her collection of jobs Mary could not rival her great-great-grandfather in employment discomfort (Dickens had worked as a drudge in a blacking factory), but she certainly outdid him in variety, having put in time as a bar maid, a film extra, a cook, a maid, a seller of fireworks, a saleswoman at an airforce base, an assistant television producer, and a secretary in a firm that made skins for skinless sausages.

But her book isn't about those jobs, except indirectly. It is an entertaining story, set in London, about a single girl, Jane Carpenter, whose nearly perfect but extremely sheltered life is suddenly torn apart by the death of her American fiancé in Vietnam. Suffering intense guilt that because of her conventional upbringing she had remained a virgin during her brief engagement, she tries to make up for it belatedly by throwing herself into a series of meaningless experiences including drugs, and unwanted pregnancy, and a near abortion, until she is ultimately forced to find her own set of standards in a balance between those of her strict childhood and our present permissive society.

"Because the book is written in the first person, it's terribly hard for people to accept the fact that it's a novel, not an autobiography and that all those things haven't necessarily happened to me," says Mary. "When I meet people they constantly act surprised and all the sort of person who would have done THAT!"

Because she had a fulltime job as an editor at one of London's largest paperback houses, as well as a number of freelance assignments, including the editing of several anthologies of horror stories ("Subtle horror" she explains) children's ghost stories, and joke books, Mary could only work on her novel on Sunday afternoons.

"On Saturdays I used to do my shopping and work on my anthologies," she says, "and on Sunday mornings I would sleep late, but then, no matter where I was, I reserved that afternoon for writing. To make the time really count I used to work out Sunday's schedule ahead of time, usually on the tube going to work, and since I was usually late I was able to get a seat."

"Sometimes I just loved writing and felt it all worked, and sometimes I hated every moment," she goes on, "but I became terribly absorbed. When I was doing the part about my fiancé's death, for instance, I had to imagine every detail of how I would feel, and I actually began to live the whole thing. Apparently I went around for days looking absolutely desolate with everyone worrying about me and asking each other what was wrong. It was the first time I'd ever been so involved in what I was writing."

Mary had been doing some less involved writing, however, for a long time, since the age of six, in fact, when she used to exchange letters in rhyme and couplet with her grandmother (not herself a Dickens, but married to Dickens' grandson).

"I became sort of the poet laureate of the family. Everyone got a birthday poem, about their age and whatever they'd been doing all year, and I always wrote a poem for important occasions. Actually, thinking back, I guess I wrote an awful lot of rubbish!"

Now, with her first book just published in the United States and already a big success in London where it was printed in September, Mary is at work on her second novel.

But she has to fit in among a number of other projects. With her mother, a secondary school teacher, she is writing several books of puzzles and quizzes, and "games for children to play in the car." Then there's London's BBC radio, where she often appears on a program "Listen with Mother," featuring stories for five-year olds. "I tell stories about a character I made up called Big Fat Rosie, and I do it with sound effects," she says. "I'll say something like 'and then Big Fat Rosie began to snore and it sounded like this — Cor-fyphooohhh...' The children love the sounds and they can say them over again with their mothers." Now BBC puts out a book at the same time as the program which has all the sounds written out.

The program, like Mary's anthologies and books, has also become a big success. "I guess I tend to do anything anyone asks me to do," she says, "because I'm terrified they won't ask me again."

The youngest of four children, Mary describes her mother as "the brains of the family. She and I are the writers, one of my brothers is an organist, another works in an electronics firm, and the third is an inventor so the family is a good balance between the artistic and scientific. We can handle most things that come along."

Tempt Vegetable Haters With Peppers

By BARBARA GIBBONS

Got a family of vegetable-haters? Perhaps you just haven't found the right vegetable. Or the right way to cook it.

Peppers, for example. For some reason kids and men just don't seem to think of peppers as vegetables. The husband or tyke who turns thumbs down or nose up at parsnips and spinach will munch happily on green pepper...particularly if it's raw.

How about cooked pepper?

Why not borrow a page from Oriental or Italian cuisine? After all, everybody loves Chinese and Italian food!

With both the Oriental and Italian chef, the preferred procedure with green peppers is to fry them...however, that doesn't rule it out in our book. With a nonstick skillet and our Slim Gourmet technique you can prepare enough Italian or Oriental fried peppers to serve four—with only one teaspoon of oil! That's only a few drops per person! No wonder these pepper dishes are so much lower in calories than most mushy, mashed vegetables laddled with butter.

SERVE CHICKEN

For a main course with either dish, why not serve calorie-wise broiled chicken breasts. If you're preparing the Oriental-style peppers, baste your chicken with soy sauce. For Italian-style chicken, baste it with bottled low-calorie Italian salad dressing and sprinkle lightly with grated Parmesan cheese. Either way, an appealing meal that doesn't seem "dietetic."

ORIENTAL FRIED PEPPERS AND ONIONS

5 sweet green frying peppers (or 3 small bell peppers)
1 very large onion (or 2 small)

2 tablespoons soy sauce
1 tablespoon water
1 teaspoon salad oil

Slice the tops from the peppers. Cut in narrow lengthwise strips, removing the inner pulp and seeds. Peel and slice the onion and break into rings. Combine all ingredients in a nonstick covered skillet over medium heat. Cook, covered, two minutes. Uncover and continue cooking, stirring frequently with a wooden spoon, until moisture evaporates and vegetables just begin to brown slightly in remaining oil. Don't overcook; onions and peppers should remain firm and crunchy. Serves four, 36 calories each.

LOW CALORIE ITALIAN FRIED PEPPERS

5 sweet green frying peppers (or 3 small bell peppers)

1 medium onion
2 cloves of garlic, minced
2 tablespoons dry red wine
1 tablespoon water
1 teaspoon salad oil
½ teaspoon oregano or Italian seasoning
Salt and pepper

Prepare peppers and onions as in previous recipe. Combine all ingredients in a covered skillet. Cook as in previous recipe. Serves four, 33 calories each.

(For more low-calorie Italian recipes and diet tips send a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 25 cents to SLIM GOURMET ITALIAN RECIPES, in care of The Register.)

Art Of Meditation Aids Novice Women Relaxers

By JOAN COLBY
Copley News Service

Recently we began attending a series of lectures on the Art of Meditation. Meditation is not only an "in" activity (or nonactivity) we were told, but is also good for you. It helps you relax.

It also can enable you to experience life-changing mystical revelations, but, on the whole I would be satisfied with learning to relax even though our son and three friends are engaged in an indoor football contest while our daughters and ten cohorts practice song and dance routines for the 6th grade variety show.

The lecture audience was composed both of people who wanted to learn relaxing and people who wanted to have the Secrets of the Universe revealed.

The hopeful relaxers were mainly female, with tension lines engraved on their foreheads by the rigors of home-making and gracious living. The Universal Secret seekers were mostly young, hirsute, and either well on their way to enlightenment or stoned.

Luckily, we did not have to assume the Lotus position in order to begin. The one time I managed to achieve the Lotus position, I could never get around to emptying my mind, because of the distracting cramp in my left thigh, not to mention my dislocated right knee.

Instead, we were told to merely relax by a lady with obvious hypnotic powers. I got so fantastically relaxed, I came home and dropped off to sleep right in the middle of the TV thriller of the season, which necessitated a frantic call to my neighbor the next morning to learn the spine-chilling conclusion.

Regardless, hoping to recapture that pleasant sensation of total relaxation, I decided to do some meditation homework.

Turning off "Beat the Clock" and sending my children out to play, I arranged myself in a comfortable posture and looked around for an aesthetic object on which to meditate.

I eliminated Three's finger paintings and a wall plaque that proclaims my home is "clean enough to be healthy, dirty enough to be happy" which always arouses my guilty feeling that while the first part is an overstatement, the second part is only skirting the awful truth.

Finally, I selected a cypress knee as being an object graceful and natural enough to contemplate.

However, what seemed easy in a room full of shut-eyed meditators, steered by that mesmerizing voice, was a lot tougher in my own family room with the cat circling me in fascination and my children peering through the window, laughing and pointing.

Though I tried like mad to be serene, focusing on how heavy my hands were getting, and how vacant my mind was becoming, little thoughts kept flashing on my mental screen. Thoughts like, "I wonder if the potatoes are boiling over?" "Is it my turn to drive to Girl Scouts tonight?" and "Boy, is meditation boring!"

FUN NIGHT — Mrs. William Cessna, dean of chairmen of Midway City Woman's Club, will be in charge of the program featuring a variety of musical numbers at the potluck-dinner and game night sponsored by the club at 6 p.m. Friday, June 8, in the clubhouse. ## FUNNY BUSINESS

MIXED REACTION EXPECTED

'Superstar' Unlike Any Other Picture

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "Jesus Christ Superstar" is perhaps the most remarkable film to emerge from Hollywood since Cecil B. DeMille founded the place.

Director Norman Jewison has transformed the rock concert into a celebration of Christian youth using panoramas of the Negev Desert and ancient ruins to add dimensions never anticipated in the stage presentation.

Unlike any other religious movie, "Jesus Christ Superstar" discards the heavy self-consciousness of Biblical epics. The cast, headed by Ted Neeley in the title role, is composed of performers in their 20's and stresses historical verisimilitude and jarring 20th century reality. Ancient Roman eagle staffs are seen side by side with submachine guns.

Traditional religionists will almost certainly be turned off by the Universal picture, but young people will storm the boxoffice.

Phraseology of scripture has been updated even in minor passages in favor of clarity.

As Christ is being crucified instead of saying, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do," young Neeley is heard to say, "Forgive them, Father, they don't know what they're doing." Purists are liable to be offended. But as in the case with the play, the patina of awe has been lifted, leaving the reverent and mystical elements intact.

Jewison, who also produced the musical in association with Robert Stigwood, filmed the entire movie on location in Israel during a 14-week interval.

"The picture is remarkable because it breaks away from traditional motion picture techniques and is equally revolutionary in its treatment of the passion play. Movie-goers will see something new in every scene."

The music of composer Andrew Lloyd Webber is overwhelming as conducted by Andre Previn, who whips from a full symphony orchestra to small rock combos within a single bar.

So far not even Universal executives are sure what sort of movie they have on their hands.

But there is a general feeling at the studio that it is the hottest prospect it has ever produced. One spokesman said, "This is the most extraordinary film in our history."

It may be safely predicted that no film bears even a remote resemblance to "Jesus Christ Superstar"—it is an experience for persons of all faiths, the unchurched and people who dig spectacular movies.

Bit Parts: Paramount has cancelled plans to film "Camille" which Franco Zeffirelli was supposed to direct. Marlon Brando is scheduled to appear on the Dick Cavett show June 12. Johnny Mathis will sing at the White House dinner June 5 honoring President Robert of Liberia.

Temper Tantrum Postpones Actor's Career In Movies

By JAMES MEADE

Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD—When cast at the age of 10 through his talent-agent father, Robin Fox, in "Mrs. Miniver" (1950), Edward Fox rebelled.

"Apparently I kicked up a mighty fuss," the 33-year-old Fox said in an interview.

"Shrieked, stamped my feet, tooted up a real tantrum. In the end, my parents, very disappointed, had to withdraw me. So my middle brother James, got the part."

James went on to make a career in such quality films as "The Loneliness of the Long-Distance Runner" and "The Servant" and commercial movies like "Those Magnificent Men in Their Flying Machines" and "Thoroughly Modern Millie."

Harrowing Edward went to Harrow, the public school that once boasted of Winston Churchill as a student. At 17, a trade was suggested so Edward became a porter at an exclusive haberdashery. He returned to merchandising after two years of military service but not for long.

Fox turned up at the store one day in a prince of Wales checked suit last worn by a deceased uncle in 1911. "It was a very long affair that I thought somewhat smart."

"This is the last straw, Fox," the stunned store manager fumed. "For heaven's sake, why don't you go be an actor or something?"

Given the choice of being an actor or something, Fox drifted into the profession he once had spurned, starting at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts.

Through stage and television appearances, Edward became known as the dependable, if not charismatic, brother of James Fox.

Everything changed when director Joseph Losey cast Edward as the nice-guy aristocrat spurned by Julie Christie in favor of former Alan Bates in Harold Pinter's "The Go-Between."

Edward won the British Academy's supporting-actor award. Director Fred Zinnemann saw "Shrieked, stamped my feet, tooted up a real tantrum. In the end, my parents, very disappointed, had to withdraw me. So my middle brother James, got the part."

Edward was right for the title role in Frederick Forsyth's "The Day of the Jackal," which Universal was going to finance on locations throughout Europe.

"Now that I'm seriously starting in the theater I shall never get out of the business," Fox said. "I would like to do things other than acting but not in the cinema. Producing and directing there is too specialized—people have spent their lives doing it."

"In the theater I can still be an actor and do other things such as produce or direct. This has been the age of the director in the English theater, not a reasonably good theory." (In England directors are more entrepreneurs than elsewhere.)

"The Day of the Jackal," the story of a hired assassin's attempt to murder Gen. Charles de Gaulle in 1963, was filmed in Vienna, Rome, Genoa, Nice, the south of France and Paris. It portrays a cat-and-mouse game between French police and a wily marksman believed to have been responsible for the assassinations of Rafael Trujillo and Patrice Lumumba.

The job of Fox and Zinnemann was to portray this cool professional killer without trench-coatism; keep him calm and professionally detached, and yet hold audience interest for two and a half hours.

"Zinnemann said to do a bit of walking about as a pleasant, relaxed man, as unlike the stereotype of the killer as possible."

SCR Extends Run Of Current Plays

A continuing demand for tickets has prompted the management at South Coast Repertory Theatre to extend the world premiere productions of "In The Midst Of Life" and "The Clowns" through June.

The two productions, currently playing in repertory, represent a major achievement for the Costa Mesa theater. The difficulties of successfully mounting two original works simultaneously represents a major step forward both artistically and technically, and the resulting approval from the public has caused the expanded schedule.

"In The Midst Of Life" is based on the life and writings of Ambrose Bierce, legendary San Francisco columnist of the 1890's, and is written by the team of Ron Thronson and Toni Shearer aided with additional music from Bryant McKernan. Fans of Bierce will recognize "Owl Creek Bridge," "The Devil's Dictionary" and "Fantastic Fables," classic vignettes of humor and satire, some of them set to music.

Alternating with "In The Midst Of Life" is "The Clowns," a look at the silent film greats of the past. Chaplin, Keaton, Laurel and Hardy will be rediscovered in this stage presentation by the SCR Actor's Mime Theatre (AMT). Described as a "slapstick symphony" the production seeks to explore the art of comedy through pantomime without restriction on the audience as to age or vocabulary.

Performances of "In The Midst Of Life" are on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, while "The Clowns" plays on Wednesday and Thursday. Curtain time for both productions is 8 p.m. and reservations can be made by calling the SCR box office or at all Mutual agencies.

'Bug' Gets Star Billing In Disney Show

LOS ANGELES—The Love Bug, that crazy little car, performs one of the most difficult and comic acts in the history of the show business as it chases Goochy in the all-new "Disney On Parade," opening June 5 at the Los Angeles Sports Arena for 27 performances. The Love Bug actually rides a wire high above the arena floor, in pursuit of the long tongue. When he's happy, he smiles and bats his eyes. When he's angry, he hisses white smoke. He can clang his hubcaps, extend his bumpers, rock and move without a driver.

This production is one of seven full-scale numbers in the show. Performances will be Tuesday through Sunday, 8 p.m.; Matinees, Wednesday, 2 p.m.; Saturdays and Sundays, 2 p.m. The run will end June 24.

Benefit Race Set June 26

TUSTIN—The first annual "Night at the Races" benefit for the American Cancer Society will take place June 26 at Los Alamitos Race Course, it was announced here by the Orange County unit.

Tickets for the event, which will include admittance to the clubhouse, a buffet dinner and a reserved table for the evening overlooking the race track, are available at the county chapter's office, 18356 E. Irvine Blvd., Tustin.

Marion Carvell and Rosella Fiedler are co-chairmen of the fund-raising affair.

If your birthday or anniversary takes place before June 20, we will give you a 4-course banquet, a celebration cake and a present completely free of charge, at 1520 A.D., the English Theatre Restaurant you've seen in Time Magazine and TV News.

'Planned Community' Zoning Hearing Set

IRVINE—The planning commission this past week agreed in principle, to allow proposed commercial uses to remain in plans for the development of a 30-acre parcel near the intersection of Culver Drive and Walnut Avenue.

But the commission directed the staff to draft a proposal for a July 12 public hearing which would assign the property a "planned community" zoning designation.

The owner of the parcel, Bruce E. Nott, had originally requested commercial zoning, but the commission opted for a planned community designation after the staff indicated that this would give the commission more control of the proposed uses.

When the commission first considered the Nott request at its May 10 meeting, some commissioners had objected to the proposed commercial development, maintaining that there was already too much commercial zoning in the area.

If approved by the commission after the July 12 hearing, the planned community zoning designation will have to be approved by the city council before development can start.

In other action, the commission:

—Agreed in principle that the city's present prohibition of construction on hillsides with more than a 20 per cent grade ought to be made more flexible, and asked the staff to draft a proposal for a committee to establish hillside development "guidelines."

—Approved the design of a wall proposed by Richard B. Smith, Inc. for a 150-unit condominium project in Turtle Rock near the intersection of Culver Drive and Campus Drive.

—Postponed until Thursday a further consideration of the preliminary planning commission budget, set at $306,848 after some commissioners questioned whether the $69,617 earmarked for advance planning and special projects was inadequate.

—Approved a set of rules for the conduct of commission business.

Fuel Systems Grad

STANTON — Airman Michael K. Ellis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elton Ellis, 7771 Sandelwood Way, has graduated from the U. S. Air Force aircraft fuel systems equipment mechanic course at Chanute AFB, Ill.

Ellis, trained to inspect and repair the intricate fuel systems of current Air Force aircraft, is being assigned to Beale AFB, Calif.

Oswald: "An honest opponent is frequently a blessing to declarer. Not because he is honest but because he tries to help his partner when the only man he can help is declarer."

Jim: "East was one of these honest, but misguided players. He took his ace of clubs and led two rounds of trumps. East couldn't wait to signal with the 10 of hearts on that second trump."

Oswald: "That signal caused South to pause and reflect. His contract wasn't very good to start with and he had intended to try the heart finesse. The signal caused him to see if he couldn't find another line of play."

Jim: "He did find one. There wasn't too much chance, but any chance was better than none and South believed East's signal. So he led his 10 of diamonds. West covered with the queen. South won in dummy; cashed dummy's ace of hearts and ran off all his trumps."

Oswald: "On the last trump East had to part with a diamond or chuck his king of hearts with either play being fatal."

Jim: "This type of play is called a 'Vienna coup.' It was necessary to find the queen of diamonds right; catch East with four diamonds and prepare for it by cashing the ace of hearts as a starter."

Ele and Walt's DATE-LINE

Dear Ele: I am very overweight and not attractive at all. I realize and accept these defects because the rest of my family is just the same. What concerns me is that several attractive, slim, popular women regularly seek out my company. It seems like they want to be my friend, but I am suspicious.

Maybe they want me around to make them look even more beautiful in comparison, or maybe they feel more relaxed in my company because they know I'll never be any competition for them. These suspicions may be unfair. Can you suggest a test I could make to find out?

Dear 227: You're right to be suspicious of your suspicions. Often a person who has been born beautiful takes it as a matter of small import. Not considering looks a big deal, she may be much concerned about her friend's personality and heart than are people who are less secure about their appearance.

Ask yourself if these women ever indulge in mean jokes at your expense, desert you when an attractive guy appears on the scene, or turn a deaf ear when you try to share your own adventures or thoughts.

If you chalk up two or three "no's" to that trio of questions, I'd say the women genuinely value your company. If that's the verdict, it's time to examine your motives for being with them. Specifically, do you focus on their minds and hearts as well as their spectacular packaging?

Incidentally I'd urge you to see a competent doctor. Before settling for a "fat family fat me" destiny. Being grossly overweight taxes the heart and bars you from dozens of enriching activities. You may find that an MD is your key to more healthy proportions.—Ele

Dear Walt: I'd like to go back to school in the fall, but I am afraid of what people would say because I swore when I left that I'd never return. My friends are pretty sarcastic.—Moss

Dear Moss: I suggest you see a counselor at school and discover what can be done to customize your curriculum so that you've greater chances for scholastic success. If you could point out to friends that the school had compromised in letting you substitute courses or pick instructors, you'd have the base to forecast a whole new ball game.

If you can't face their jibes about regular school, how about the night-school scene? With some dollars-and-cents figures from the counselor to contrast earnings of dropouts vs. high-school grads, you will have sound rationale for your study.—Walt

Dear Ele and Walt: What is the etiquette about paying for dinner when you are going out "Dutch treat" with a boy? Do you still have to slip him the money? Or have things become more open?—Fern

Dear Fern: This isn't cut and dried. So discuss it in advance with any male "Dutch treat" companion. We'd hope he was secure enough not to blush at open payment. Maybe he'd feel easier if you told the waitress at the time she took your order, "Separate checks, please, tonight's the night we go 'Dutch.'"

You could say that far better than he could, since it has the ring in your mouth of taking on a responsibility rather than shirking it off.—Ele and Walt

At what age should a boy be allowed night dates? How old should a girl be to go steady? These and other pressing questions are discussed in Ele and Walt's pamphlet, "Date and Marriage Timetable." For a copy, send 25 cents (one quarter) and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Teen-Age Date-Line, in care of this newspaper.

Doughty Skunk

A skunk prefers to live in peace and uses its ultimate weapon only for defense. In a flash, the animal can discharge, through twin nozzles, a spray of stinging, acrid, yellowish liquid. A skunk's very strength proves to be a weakness on the road—it ambles along without fear, not conceiving that anything would be rash enough to attack it, like an automobile.

Guest Speaker

SANTA ANA—Former presidential adviser Robert Finch will be the commencement speaker at the Pepperdine University School of Law graduation to be held at 11 a.m. Saturday in the Plaza of the Flags, Orange County Courthouse.

The former lieutenant governor will also receive the university's honorary doctor of laws degree.

Social Security Advice Given To New Brides

SANTA ANA—The Social Security Administration office here has issued an annual reminder to June brides that they should get their Social Security cards and records changed to include their new names.

Service representative Loretta Brooks said a prompt change of name on a card will help avoid confusion in determination of eligibility for benefits and in the processing of income tax returns.

Although several firms have been notifying new brides that they will change their records for a fee ranging from $2 to $3, the Social Security Office will perform this service free, she said.

The changes can be made either by telephoning or visiting the office, located at 1438 E. First St., Mrs. Brooks added.

Restrictions Placed On Campgrounds

Overnight camping in the Cleveland National Forest has been restricted to developed recreation sites authorized by the forestry department.

In addition, forest supervisor Kenton P. Clark said campers are limited to a 14-day maximum stay at campgrounds in any 30-day period and maximum stay in picnic areas is limited to day use only from 6 a.m. to 9 p.m. Maximum stay in temporary overflow areas is limited to weekends and federal holidays.

Under the restriction tents, trailers, pickup campers, mobile tents, and backpackers are allowed at developed recreation sites, posted overflow areas and specific areas posted for public recreation.

Campgrounds also are limited to one family or party with a maximum of six persons and to vehicles that can be contained in the parking facilities, Clark said.

Regulations governing occupancy are posted at the entrance to each campground.

Advance reservations are required only at group campgrounds. Reservations can be made through district ranger stations at Alpine, Escondido and Santa Ana. Group camping fees start at $10 per night depending on the group's size.

Camping fees are $2 per day at most family campgrounds. Several of the smaller and more remote sites are free. Daily fees are paid directly at the campground entrance and reservations are not required.

The Golden Eagle Passport, formerly good for year long camping, will not be valid in California National Forest this year, Clark said. The passports cover entry fees only to areas of the National Park System and are available for $10 at the post office.

Holders of Golden Age passports, issued free to persons 62 years or older, are entitled to a 50 per cent discount on recreation use fees in designated areas. Passports may be obtained through the post office.

Weiskopf 3-Stroke Winner In Kemper Open

In The Rough

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Tom Weiskopf, who had promised when he took the third round lead not to play conservative golf, kept his word Sunday and carded a solid 4-under-par 68 to win the $40,000 first prize in the Kemper Open by a three stroke margin over Lanny Wadkins.

The 30-year-old Weiskopf, winning his seventh career tournament and his second this year, had a total of 271, 17-under-par, the best 72-hole score in the Kemper's history.

Wadkins, on his second year in the PGA tour, shot a 3-under-par 69 Sunday on the 7,219-yard Quail Hollow Country Club course, longest on the pro circuit this year, for a 274 total, 14-under-par.

Weiskopf had rounds of 65, 70 and 69 on his first three days in the Kemper, which he won previously in 1971. Sunday's triumph in the $200,000 event marked the first time anyone had won the five-year-old tournament twice. Wadkins had carded 66, 68 and 71 on the earlier days.

Weiskopf had five birdies and a bogey in his final round and Wadkins five birdies and two bogeys.

The Weiskopf-Wadkins duel left the rest of the field far behind. Lou Graham shot a 67 Sunday, second round leader Leonard Thompson a 71 and Dave Hill a 71 for a three-way tie at third place with 11-under-par 277.

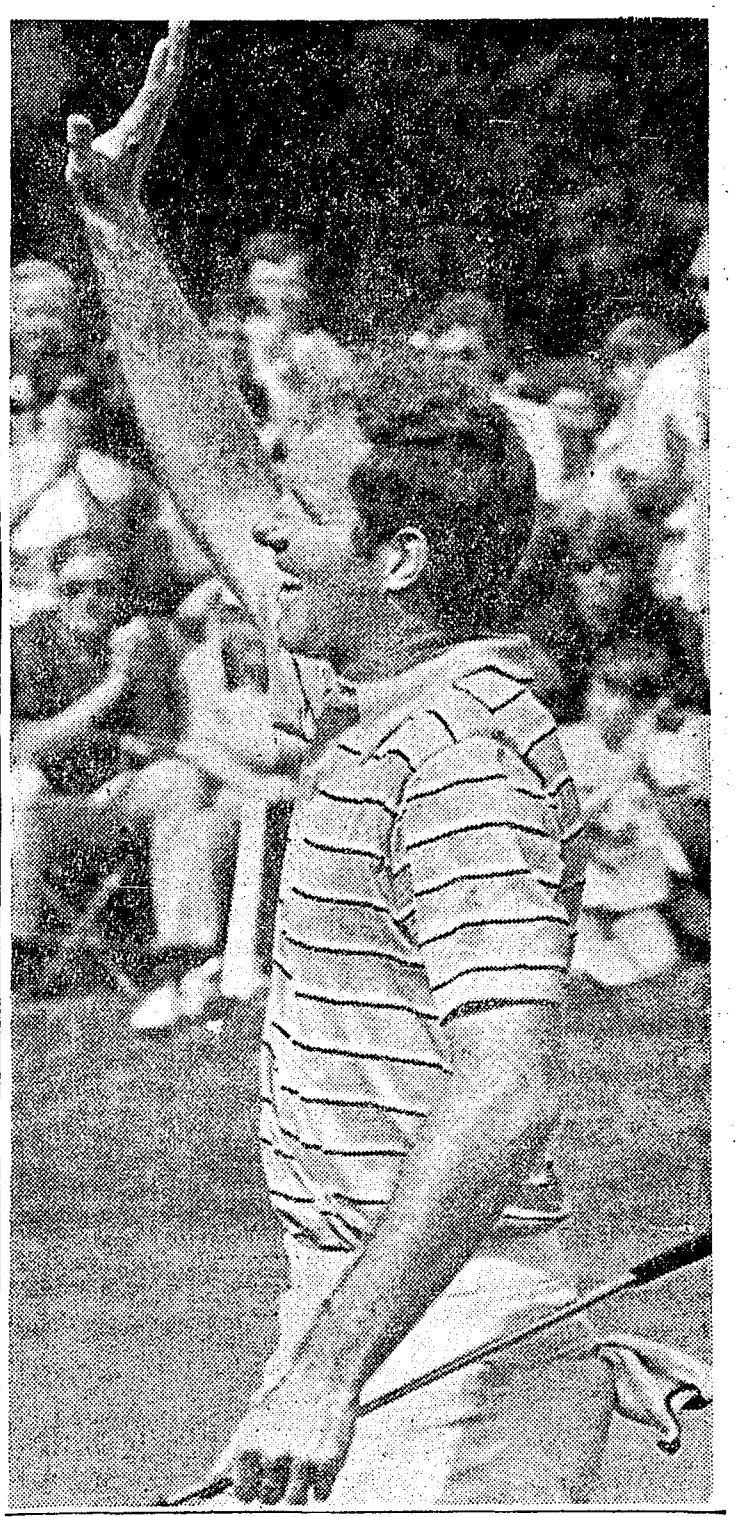

Finishing at 10-under-par 278 were Dan Sikes with a final round 67, Mac McLendon with a 67, Ken Still a 73, Art Wall with a 70, John Lister a 67 and Cesar Sanudo a 73.

With his victory Sunday, Weiskopf passed Wadkins on the money list, moving to fourth place with $121,822 while Wadkins fell to fifth at $114,521 including $22,800 for his second place finish.

"I've worked very hard and I didn't sleep very much at all this week," said Weiskopf. "I wanted to win so much."

Irvine Stays Undefeated

Six-Run 6th Beats E. Ill.

(Special to The Register) SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — Sophomore Jerry Maras of Garden Grove will get the call tonight when UC Irvine faces Ithaca of New York in the battle of the unbeaten in the NCAA College Division World Series.

Only three teams are left in the double elimination tournament after Sunday's rain-interrupted competition.

Gary Wheelock hurled a two-hitter to down Eastern Illinois University, 6-2, Sunday after rain stopped play for two and one-half hours in the third inning.

In other action Missouri-St. Louis eliminated Jacksonville, 2-1, and Ithaca ousted defending champion Florida Southern, 4-1. Missouri-St. Louis and Eastern Illinois clashed in the late contest on Sunday with the loser eliminated.

Just like their first game, the Anteaters waited until the second-to-the-last inning before rallying for the win.

On Saturday the Anteaters scored five times in the eighth to win 6-5 over Mississippi-Louis and Sunday it was a six-run sixth inning outburst which turned the tide.

Wheelock and Rich Molina opened the inning with walks and Jack Cleveland legged out an infield single for only the third hit against Wally Ensminger.

Catcher Terry Stupp slashed a double off the outfield wall for two runs to tie the contest and Jeff Malinoff stroked a two-run double to give UCI the lead. Malinoff scored on a single by Rod Spence.

Dave Lyons singled and Dan Hanson grounded out for the first out of the inning, scoring Spence to give the Anteaters their six runs.

All games on Sunday were shortened to seven innings because of the threat of rain.

Wheelock allowed a first inning single and a no-out two-run home run by Randy Trapp before retiring 18 of the next 19 batters as the long delay only seemed to strengthen the Irvine pitcher.

Wheelock struck out only three in picking up his 11th win in 15 decisions for the season.

The Anteaters, which entered the tournament as the top-ranked team in the college division, are now 42-12, including two wins in the World Series.

The loser of the 4:30 (local time) contest between Ithaca and UC Irvine will play the survivor of the Missouri-St. Louis vs. Eastern Illinois clash in the second game today.

The championship will be decided on Tuesday with two games slated if needed.

A crowd of 1,627 braved the rain and remained despite the outburst as helicopters were employed to dry the field.

Westlake's Bat Fires Up ASU

(Special to The Register)

MESA, Ariz.—Clay Westlake had six hits in eight at bats to lead Arizona State to 14-1 and 14-0 wins over the University of Denver this past weekend in the District 7 NCAA University Division baseball playoffs.

Westlake, a freshman from Ioara, High was batting .385 for the Sun Devils entering the series.

Eddie Bane of Westminster hurled Arizona State to the win in the first contest with a NCAA record 19 strikeouts and Jim Otten was the pitcher in the second contest with 12 whiffs.

Gary Atwell, who played high school ball at Kennedy (La Palma), only had one hit in the two-game series.

Arizona State, which was runner-up in the World Series last year, meets Penn State on Friday in the opening day of action at Omaha, Neb., following a contest between Minnesota and Oklahoma.

The second day of action pits Texas against Georgia Southern and three-time defending champion USC against Harvard.

Red-Hot Calvin Nabs OC Invitational Title

Santa Ana College freshman Roger Calvin is on some kind of hot streak.

He concluded the month of May by winning the State City College golf championship to become the first from his school to accomplish the feat.

Sunday he began June with the same torrid pace, edging club teammate Allen Wells on the first hole of sudden death playoff to capture the Orange County Invitational Golf Championship at Willowick.

Calvin put together consistent rounds of 69s to capture the title with a 54-hole total of 207. Wells held a three-stroke lead heading into the final round, but fell to the red-hot Calvin.

Willowick teammate and Santa Ana College sophomore Jerry Wisz followed with a 209, while Don Beets and Jim McKieghan also of Willowick were one stroke behind at 210 and UC Irvine's Gary Singer came in at 211.

Calvin started the day at 133 five strokes behind the pace-setting Wells, but the leader succumbed to Calvin's red-hot final round and came in with a 74 to force the playoffs.

Calvin then put away the tourney title on the first hole of the playoffs, in similar fashion that he captured the State City golf crown.

Asher Leading Downey Keglers By 23 Pins

DOWNEY (UPI) — Barry Asher's production fell off sharply Sunday afternoon, but he still had enough pins to lead 23 others into the semifinals of the $55,000 Winston-Salem Open bowling tournament.

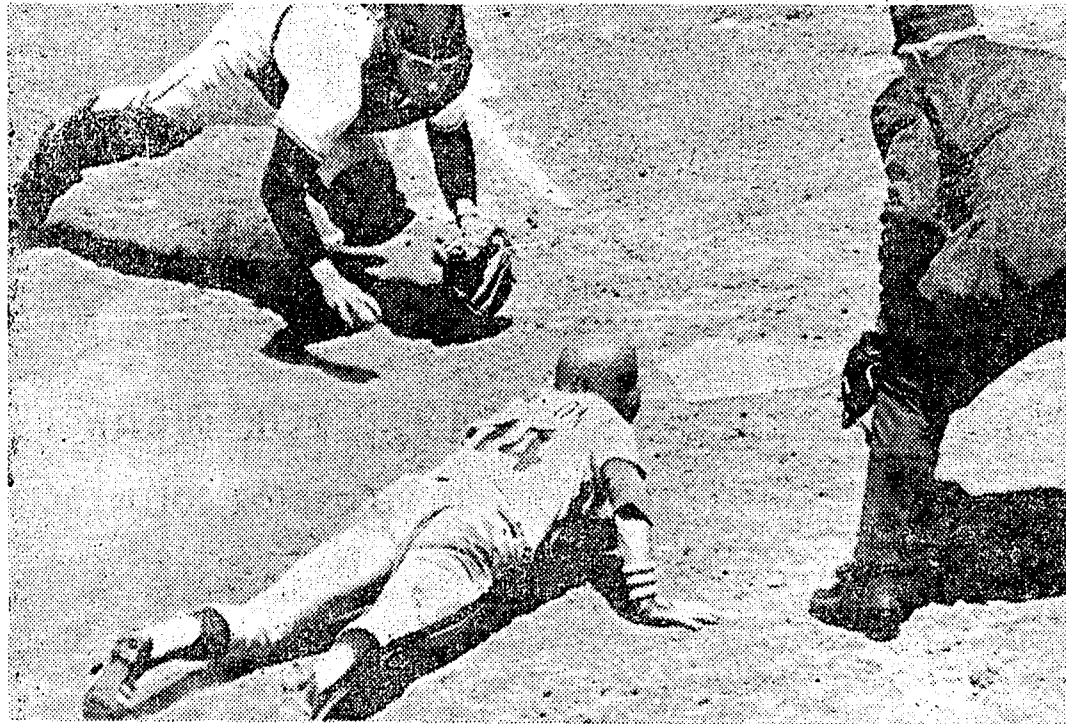

The 24-game match play segment began Sunday evening. Asher, who took a 35-pin advantage into the third and final six-game qualifying set, saw his lead fall to 11 when he shot only 1,220. Since play began 18 games ago, Asher had 3,965 pins, an average of 220.

As the 144-man lineup was cut for the first time, holding down second place was Johnny Guenther of Seattle. Fifth when the day began, Guenther had a high game of 259 in his 1,354 effort. Nine pins further back in third was Roy Buckley of Columbus, Ohio, after a 1,235 third-round pinfall.

Rounding out the top five were Marty Piraino of Syracuse, N.Y., and Don McCune of Munster, Ind. Piraino showed 3,938, while McCune, who has won two titles and $40,000 thus far in 1973, had 3,855. Norm Meyers of St. Louis had the day's best set, a 1,375, with high games of 247 and 267.

At the end of today's competition, only the high five rollers will advance to Tuesday's televised finale, where the winner will receive $6,000.

The 10 leading scorers after three rounds (18 games):
1. Barry Asher, Costa Mesa, Calif., 3,965
2. Johnny Guenther, Seattle, 3,954
3. Roy Buckley, Columbus, Ohio, 3,945
4. Marty Piraino, Syracuse, N.Y., 3,938
5. Don McCune, Munster, Ind., 3,855
6. Greg Baderden, Ontario, Calif., 3,842
7. Norm Meyers, St. Louis, 3,820
8. Sandy Finkelstein, Corland, N.Y., 3,815
9. Paul Colwell, Tucson, Ariz., 3,803
10. Tom Hudson, Akron, Ohio, 3,783

OOPS—I MISSED—It looks an even race as San Francisco catcher Mike Sadek and Philadelphia's Tom Hutton stretch to reach home plate. Actually Sadek fielded a squeeze bunt by Larry Bowa in front of the plate, swung around to tag Hutton trying to score, but Hutton missed the plate. Hutton then dove back toward the plate, but this time Sadek nailed him.

Expos Stun Dodgers, 4-1

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Hal Breeden walked with the bases loaded and two out in the eighth inning to break a 1-1 deadlock and Ernie McNally pitched a six-hitter Sunday as the Montreal Expos beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 4-1 before an Old-Timers Day crowd of 34,785.

At Downing walked Breeden on four straight pitches after getting an 0-2 count on the Expo first baseman to bring in Tim Lincecum from base.

Taking their second straight from the Dodgers, the Expos loaded the bases on singles by Foli, Ron Woods and a walk to Bob Bailey.

Clyde Mashore hit a two-run homer into the leftfield pavilion off Dodger reliever Tommy John in the ninth inning. It was his third homer of the season, all in the past week.

McNally posted his third victory in four decisions, striking out eight and walking two. The loss went to Downing, now 5-2.

The Expos scored the first run in the game in the fifth when John Boccabella came home from third on Foli's attempted squeeze bunt that went over Downing for an infield single.

In the bottom of the inning, back-to-back doubles by Ron Cey and Ron Joshua provided the Dodgers with their run.

Angels Bow To Yankees

By JOHN STELLMAN

NEW YORK—A good thing finally happened to the Angels after they lost a 3-2 decision to the Yankees Sunday. They left town, and headed home.

Feeling more like a band of traveling gypsies than a baseball team, the Angels can look forward to June, when they'll be home long enough to get the washing done.

It seems like they've been on the road more than Henry Kissinger. And they have.

Despite winding up a 4-8 trip on a disappointing note, encouraging signs lie ahead. Twenty of their next 28 games will be played at the big-A.

"We've got to make our move right now, if we're going to move at all," assessed Bobby Winkles after the Angels played 28 of their first 47 on the road.

Their 25-22 record is admirable. Winkles wanted to come home with a 26-21 record, but he has to be happy when he considers the fact that his team spent more time in airport lobbies, than on the field.

"This club is capable of making a move," the manager confessed, after Sparky Lyle shut off a ninth inning rally to preserve the victory.

"All we need is a base hit in the right spot. We had the guy on the ropes. But we've still got a couple of guys who aren't relaxed enough to comprehend the situation."

The manager admitted that Jerry Davanon fell into that category.

After Felipe Alou's error and Alan Gallagher's single got the ninth inning started, Davanon failed to bunt on a two strike pitch.

"He just missed the sign," Winkles answered, when asked if Davanon had been asked to sacrifice with two strikes.

"In a game like that, you're not going to have a guy bunt with two strikes. Jerry probably was a little tight, and he might have looked right past Salty (Parker)."

The Angels broke the ice against George Medich in the sixth when Frank Robinson lashed his second double, and eventually scored at Billy Grabarkewitz grounded into a fielder's choice.

Buy Clyde Wright, who pitched himself out of tight situations in the first, fourth and fifth, surrendered three runs in the sixth.

Felipe Alou's single scored Craig Nettles with the equalizer, and when Gene Michael chopped a Baltimore hopper over Wright's head, New York had a 2-1 lead.

Horace Clarke's third of four hits, a double off the glove of McCraw, provided the insurance after two Yankee errors gave the Angels a shot at victory in the ninth.

Alou's error at first got the ninth started. But Davanon failed to sacrifice after Gallagher's hit, and Winston Llena's pinch single scored one run, instead of two.

But another error, this one by Nettles, loaded the bases with one out, providing another opportunity, but neither Vada Pinson nor Bobby Brooks could take advantage of it.

And that was just fine with the SRO bat-day crowd of 60,108, the largest ever to see the Angels play.

There won't be that many at the Big-A tomorrow night, but the surroundings will be friendly.

"If we could win 19 of those next 28," Winkles assessed, "we'd be right in the middle of it."

That might not be as difficult as getting out of Yankee Stadium Sunday.

HALOS—Rudy May, whose four shut-outs for the league lead in that department, has been demoted to the bullpen, at least for one turn. Of feel Rich Hand deserves a chance to pitch against the Angels. # Rustlers' Dodd Heads JC Stars Golden West College catcher Mike Dodd was accorded Player of the Year honors in The Register's All-Orange Community College baseball team.

Dodd, who swung the bat at a .367 clip, led the team in stolen bases with 13, had 18 extra base hits and 18 RBIs for the Rustlers. Dodd has previously been named to the all-Southern California first team, the only county player so honored.

Fullerton College led the list of 25 players selected with six while Golden West and Cypress placed five each, Orange Coast four, Santa Ana three and Saddleback 2.

Only four freshmen were chosen with Cypress' Rudy Larson and Golden West's Curt Peterson picked on the first team and Saddleback's Steve Williams and Fullerton's Larry Kaplan getting second team nods.

In an effort to pick the best 25 players in the county, some positions are overloaded.

Carpenter Tops Irvine All-Stars

Mark Carpenter, the hard-hitting first baseman from champion Los Alamitos High, was chosen Most Valuable Player and his coach Dave Hernandez was named Coach of the Year on The Register's All-Irvine League baseball team.

Carpenter swung a big bat for the Griffins with a lofty .400 average in league, but his real ability was in the field where he performed almost flawlessly at first base.

He nudged Corona del Mar

catcher Bob Palmer and Los Al teammate Bob McKelvey for Player of the Year honors.

Five members of the league champs were accorded first-team berths on the elite squad. Perfect pitcher Gary Williams (7-0) second baseman Mike Lilley, shortstop Dave Velarde and centerfielder McKelvey joined Carpenter.

Hernandez led the Griffins to their third straight Irvine League championship, and of course, has his team in the CIF "AAAA" finals.

Fleming-Smith Matchup Tops All-Stars June 22

Mike Fleming, the state's most valuable wrestler, and Kevin Smith, who took second in the state meet to Fleming, compose the top battle in the Orange County Senior all-star wrestling tournament to be held at Fullerton State College on Friday, June 22.

Fleming defeated Smith in the state and CIF finals but Smith won the regional title over Fleming. The all-star match will pit the top graduating seniors north of the Garden Grove Freeway to their counterparts south of the line.

Jim McCrillis of Bolsa Grande, which took third in the CIF, and Wayne Michaelian of Fountain Valley will coach the South team which is tentatively made up of Smith of Los Amigos, Lee Austin and George Espinoza of Bolsa Grande.

Jody Schekter Captures L-M

South African Jody Schekter shook off intermittent rain showers and a strong challenge from Englishman Brian Redman to win his third straight L&M Championship Race Sunday at the Mid-Ohio Sports Car Course.

The 23-year-old racing sensation started in the No. 2 spot on the grid, but immediately assumed the lead and held it for the entire 100 miles over the twisting 2.4 mile road course.

Schekter, who now makes his home in England, drove his Trojan T-101 Chevrolet to victory in 1:02.32, at an average speed of 96.7 miles per hour.

With only seven laps left in the 42-lap event, Redman began a charge from his second place position and narrowed Schekter's lead to just 4.4 seconds. The Englishman shadowed Schekter for the final two laps of the race, but was unable to pass the streaking South African.

In his attempt to catch Schekter, Redman tied the all-time lap record at Mid-Ohio of 1:24.4, set last year by Danny Hulme in a McLaren M-20 Can-Am car.

Third place in the $80,600 race went to veteran Mark Donohue, who competed in the Indianapolis 500 just four days earlier. Donohue drove the Roger Pensky-prepared Lola-Javelin.

Templeton's Bat Earns SA Win

Gary Templeton got his third hit of the game to single home Ray Crawford in the ninth inning to break a tie and give Santa Ana a 7-6 win over Mission Viejo to open International League play of the Orange County American Legion season Sunday afternoon. Crawford has tripled to open the inning.

Santa Ana travels to Las Vegas for five games in three days starting Tuesday.

Continental China Barred From Olympics

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Continental China will not be allowed to enter the Olympic Games until the country registers its Olympic committee.

On the last leg of a Latin American tour which included various South American and Central American countries, Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, said Saturday night on his arrival here.

On the last leg of a Latin American tour which included various South American and Central American countries, Lord Killanin told newsmen at Mexico City International Airport that he believed "China hasn't the five federations necessary to constitute an Olympic committee."

Committee. Killanin had traveled to South America to attend the Pan-American Sports Organization Congress in Santiago, Chile, from May 29-31. He will travel to Dublin, Ireland, from Mexico City.

Does The Heart Fit The Body?

By CARL SAWYER

Athletes may have "Cadillac" bodies, but many of them have "Volkswagen" hearts.

That's a crude way of saying it, but that's what physical fitness is all about, baby.

Charles Atlas would turn over in his grave if he knew what's going on these days. Barbells, tension ropes and other weight apparatus are strictly old-fashioned.

"The year 2001 has arrived in sports conditioning," exclaimed Jim Dawson, the director of the Sports Conditioning and Rehabilitation Clinic at The City Center, Orange, as he watches boys and men of all sizes work with the revolutionary conditioning equipment.

Dr. Almqvist doesn't pretend to be Orange County's answer to Dr. Robert Keenan, but his interest in sports conditioning and rehabilitation puts him at the head of the parade in Orange County.

"Call it an extension of sports medicine," explained Almqvist.

The revolutionary techniques being used at the Orange clinic are based on new theories in conditioning and enhanced by new equipment developed by Arthur Jones, a Florida man who has turned the world of body fitness and conditioning around with the development of ment that Atlas never dreamed would be developed.

Anyone familiar with the usual weightroom equipment (that requires grueling hours of repetition to raise a bulge in a bicep) stands in awe when he sees the modern equipment that fills the Sports Conditioning and Rehabilitation Clinic.

Dawson, like clinic consultant Dr. Glen Almqvist, knows that over the past twenty years athletics at all levels have undergone tremendous changes. New techniques in coaching, modernization of equipment and specialization in all fields have brought about sports programs that seek the ultimate from the individual.

Sports Conditioning Grows Fast

The field gaining most rapidly in importance is that of sports conditioning and that is what is intriguing growing numbers at their unique clinic.

Dr. Almqvist doesn't pretend to be Orange County's answer to Dr. Robert Keenan, but his interest in sports conditioning and rehabilitation puts him at the head of the parade in Orange County.

"Call it an extension of sports medicine," explained Almqvist.

Two Systems Require Growth

Under proper supervision on the Nautilus equipment, long hours lifting weights for complete recovery from knee surgery, back surgery, etc., are not necessary to return the subject to peak form.

The entire concept of conditioning and rehabilitation is based on the maximum growth stimulation to the musculoskeletal and cardiovascular systems. . . heart and body together . . . attaining high density training rather than the old prolonged repetitive movements.

High intensity training means a controlled, scheduled sequence of weight conditioning that puts each muscle group of the body to absolute failure, and at the same time stimulates maximum cardiovascular demands.

There are 17 pieces of Nautilus equipment at the clinic ready to prove the success of the theory. Cincinnati Bengals quarterback Virgil Carter, a pro athlete who never lets himself get completely out of shape, has tried it.

Lifting a maximum load as fast as one can for as long as one can to absolute failure at each of the 17 stations is the object. Carter became sick to his stomach before reaching No. 17. He was amazed.

Dr. Almqvist bases his theory on the belief that endurance is relative to cardiovascular delivery. The muscular system is only as strong as its blood supply. When this fails, the muscles must fail.

Margaret Stops Chris To Win French Open

PARIS (UPI) — Thirty-year-old Australian Margaret Court play but faltered in the final set to lose her bid for her first win in one of the big four tournaments.

She fought back three times in the first set and appeared a good bet to win the match.

But Mrs. Court proved the more consistent in the final set and the Floridian committed more unforced errors.

The American won the first tie-break 7-5 by reeling off the last five consecutive points.

But Mrs. Court showed she could come from behind too, winning the second set tie-break 8-6 after being down 5-4.

If Mrs. Court can go on to win the U.S. Open and Wimbledon crowns she will be the first woman to win the grand slam twice. She won it for the first time in 1970. This year she has already captured the Australian title.

Mrs. Court broke Miss Evert's service to win the final game. She set up the match point with a backhand volley.

In all there were seven service breaks in the final set with Mrs. Court getting four.

After a weak match start Miss Evert won most of the long rallies. Her placement and timing worked successfully.

She came back from 0-3 in the first set to pull even at 4-4. Then serving at 5-6, she fell behind 15-40. But Mrs. Court could win neither set point.

The younger woman charged the net to beat back both points. Then she made her most important comeback in the tie-break.

In the second set Miss Evert broke in the eighth game to serve for victory at 5-3. But Mrs. Court broke back without the American scoring a point.

The Australian, current leader of the Virginia Slims Tournaments, won the tie-break when Miss Evert hit a groundstroke long.

Miss Evert collected $3,255 for her second place finish.

In men's quarterfinal action 22 year-old Adriano Panatta of Italy beat Tom Okker of the Netherlands 6-3, 5-7 6-3, 6-4.

Nikki Pilic of Yugoslavia ousted Paolo Bertolucci of Italy 6-4, 3-6, 6-4.

The 33-year-old Yugoslav used a booming serve and a steady ground game to outclass stocky Bertolucci who sometimes played erratically.

Panatta came back from 0-3 in the final set, broke Dutchman's service at 4-4 and then held his own serve to win the second contest.

The two winners will meet in the semifinals.

In the men's doubles final Okker teamed with John Newcombe of Australia to beat Ilie Nastase of Romania and Jimmy Connors, Bellville, Ill. 6-1, 3-6 6-3, 5-7, 6-4.

Cleveland Falters To Late KC Rally

KANSAS CITY (UPI) — Amos Otis cracked a two-out, two-run single in the ninth inning Sunday, lifting the Kansas City Royals to a 5-4 victory over the Cleveland Indians and a sweep of their three-game series.

Paul Schaaf singled to start the winning three-run rally and took second when Gail Hopkins walked. Kurt Bevacqua bunted into a force out at third but pinch hitter Cookie Rojas drove in the first run with a single to left.

Brent Strom then replaced Ray Lamb, the losing pitcher, and got pinch hitter Hal McRae on a pop-up. John Mayberry walked, loading the bases, before Otis greeted Ed Farmer with his game-winning hit.

George Hendrick drove in two runs with a home run and a single Sunday to lead the Indians attack.

Cleveland bunched four singles for two runs in the third on singles by John Ellis, Ron Lolich, Buddy Bell and Hendrick. Hendrick cracked his fifth home in the sixth, a solo shot that carried into the rightfield bullpen, and the Indians added their final run in the eighth on Oscar Gamble's single, and a triple by Ellis.

The Royals grabbed a 1-0 lead in the first when Fred Patek singled, stole second and scored on Mayberry's single. The RBI was Mayberry's 50th of the season, tops in the major leagues.

A's Hammer Bosox

BOSTON (UPI) — Vida Blue and Horacio Pina combined for a four-hitter and Sal Bando and Ted Kubiak each drove in three runs Sunday as the Oakland A's hammered the Boston Red Sox, 12-1.

Bando tagged his 11th homer of the year with the bases empty and two out in the first inning and singled home Bert Campaneris in the sixth as the A's took a 3-0 lead. Bando also contributed a run producing single during Oakland's five-run uprising in the seventh inning.

Kubiak singled with the bases loaded for two more runs in the seventh while Campaneris sent one across on an infield single and Reggie Jackson drove in another with an infield out.

Kubiak also delivered a sacrifice fly to score Mike Hegan in the third.

The A's got another run in the eighth on a single by Angel Mangual, a wild pitch and a single by Bill North and added three more in the ninth on a two-run single by Mangual and an error by second baseman John Kennedy.

Oakland scored four runs in the eighth on a single by Sal Bando and a triple by Ted Kubiak. Bando's third home run of the season came in the eighth on a single to left field.

The Red Sox were unable to score in the ninth as the A's pitchers, Blue and Pina, combined for a four-hitter.

Blue pitched 7 1/3 innings, allowing two runs and three hits, striking out five.

Seaver Reverses Met Skid, Wins 5th Straight

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Tom Seaver Sunday pitched his fifth straight win and took over the National League lead in strikeouts as the New York Mets trimmed the San Diego Padres 9-2 to salvage the final game of their three-game set.

The Mets had dropped the first two meetings via shutouts, worked over five Padre hurlers including starter and loser Mike Caldwell, 3-7, for 12 hits. One of them was a two-out, two-run single by John Milner in the first inning that snapped a Mets scoreless string that had reached 21.

The win hiked Seaver's record to 7-3 and was the 13th time he had beaten the Padres with only one loss. The righthander struck out seven to increase his season total to 89 and pass Philadelphia's Steve Carlton who has fanned 85.

Seaver pitched 7 1/3 innings, allowing two runs and three hits, striking out five.

Streaking Cardinals Edge Houston In 10

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Tim McCarver's one-out bloop single with the bases loaded in the bottom of the 10th inning Sunday carried streaking St. Louis Cardinals to a 2-1 victory over Houston Astros.

The victory was the Cardinals' 14th in their last 16 games.

Lou Brock singled to start the inning, Ted Sizemore sacrificed Brock to second but reached when second baseman Tommy Helms dropped the throw.

Joe Torre to load the bases. Ted Simmons grounded to first baseman Lee May who threw home for the force at the plate. McCarver followed with his game winning single that dropped into leftfield.

Cub Pitcher Hits 20th HR For Win

CHICAGO (UPI) — Milt Pappas' 20th career homer and a two-run homer by rookie Pat Bourque lifted the Chicago

Cubs to a 3-0 victory over the Atlanta Braves Sunday as Pappas and Bob Locker combined on a five-hit shutout.

Pappas, who received credit for his third win against four losses, put the Cubs on the scoreboard, leading off the sixth when he hit Ron Reed's first pitch clear out of Wrigley Field. Reed, who took his seventh loss against two wins, had given up just one hit in the first five innings.

Kathy Cornelius Captures Las Vegas Title On Playoff

By ART PARRA
LAS VEGAS—Kathy Cornelius, mother of two daughters and a veteran member of the LPGA tour, won the Sealy-Faberge Golf Classic here Sunday afternoon on the first playoff hole, sinking a 5-foot putt while Judy Rankin missed a shorter try to keep the tournament deadlocked.

Both ended the regulation 54-hole test with two-under 217, necessitating the third LPGA playoff this season, by far her best in 20 years playing on the tour. Last year was her high water mark at $17,491.67. It also marked the first time she has ever participated in a playoff. Until last year, when winning the Blue Grass Open, she hadn't won a tournament in 11 years.

Mrs. Rankin, also a mother of a two-year old son, had previously had playoff experience, beating Kathy Whitworth in the Lady Eve last year. Her $11,000 check will jump her 1973 earnings to $32,586.25, moving up to fourth in total. They each left final putts on the 18th, inches from the hole which would have given either the title without a playoff, but putts wouldn't fall.

Mrs. Cornelius was one of the co-leaders when play started 3-under. She lost two strokes to par during the afternoon of pressure play that saw the lead changing hands often. Mrs. Rankin was two off the pace but came up with a 1-under final of 72, forcing the playoff.

Bonnie Bryant, a portsideer trying for her first win, slipped to a 76 but it was enough to collect a check of $4,000, best in her career. Sandra Haynie, the other principal in a triple deadlock opening Sunday's final round, had trouble all day and came in with 78-221, tying two others.

Veteran Carol Mann and Hall of Famer Betsy Rawls split third and fourth place money ($5,815 each) with identical 218's. Miss Mann had an even par 73 and Miss Rawls was 1-under for the day.

Mrs. Cornelius also won a 1973 automobile, making her effort worth more than $31,000.

Gusting winds from 20 to 30 miles per hour over the Desert Inn Country Club hampered some of the action which saw three players shooting 71, low for the day. Jocelyne Bourassa, Sherie Wilder and Beth Stone were the trio.

The 18-year old daughter Karen of Mrs. Cornelius was on hand to witness her mother pocket the largest check in her career. The younger daughter, (Kay) was at the Cornelius home in Litchfield Park, Arizona. Husband Bill, also a golf professional, galloped his champion the entire 54-holes and was one of the happiest men in the world.

"It all seems like a dream. It is the biggest win of my life and it is going to take a little time for it all to sink in. To say I wasn't happy when Judy missed that 3-footer would be a little dishonest but I know how she feels. She is one of my closest friends, so I know she is sad but happy for me," said Mrs. Cornelius.

Mrs. Rankin explained her missed putt. "It broke off coming down the hill and I played it just the opposite going back. It was Kathy's tournament and just wait until next year."

The Desert Inn Country Club, Sealy-Faberge people saw the largest crowds out for this tournament in their 3-year history.

Jake Gaither Retires At Fla. A-M

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI)—Alonzo Smith "Jake" Gaither, football coach at Florida A&M University for 25 years and a legendary figure in black college athletics, will retire as athletic director Aug. 31, the school announced Sunday.

The surprise announcement came during commencement exercises at Florida A&M, and a tearful Gaither acceded to cries of "speech, speech" from the audience of 5,000.

"People keep talking about what I've done for football and Florida A&M, but Florida A&M football has done everything for me," Gaither said between bursts of applause.

Gaither coached the Rattlers to more than 200 football victories over a quarter of a century. He overcame cancer and blindness during his long career and became athletic director after stepping down as head coach in 1945.

Q-Horses Return Banks Aims For Alamitos Title

Veteran Ronnie Banks had just ridden his 92nd mount of the Horsemen's Quarter Horse Racing Assn. winter meeting at Los Alamitos on Jan. 2, 1973 when he suddenly took ill.

Banks has been enjoying his finest season in many years, winning nine of 30 races in the first six nights of the meeting and 18 of his first 92 starts to rank among the leaders during the first 20 days.

Things went from bad to worse for Banks as he was finally hospitalized and underwent an operation for removal of an ulcer. He missed the remainder of the meeting and Bobby Adair streaked away with another riding title.

But Banks will be back when Los Alamitos Race Course opens its gates again on Wednesday night for the 79-night summer quarter horse season and from all indications, Banks has picked up where he left off Jan. 2.

Banks, who finished fourth in the jockey standings behind Adair, Terry Liphm and Curtis Porter with 63 wins here last summer, has been enjoying a successful meeting at Bay Meadows. The veteran rider, who is entering his 17th season at Los Alamitos, has battled Adair on even terms for the first 51 nights of the northern California season. Both Banks and Adair have averaged one victory for every night of the Bay Meadows meeting as each shares the lead with 51 wins.

Adair has become the premier quarter horse rider in the nation on the basis of his outstanding performances at Los Alamitos, where he has never lost a riding title since the track went to night racing in 1968. Adair has won five straight summer riding crowns and added the HQHRA title last winter as well. The Oklahoma-born rider is the only man in Los Alamitos history to surpass the 100-win figure in a single season of the veteran jockey has managed that feat four times, including the all-time track record of 113 victories established in 1971. In addition to his four straight riding titles, Adair is slowly moving in on Charles Smith as the all-time Los Alamitos leader. Smith still leads in that category with 736 lifetime wins at the Orange County track while Adair is next with 676. (Banks has 615).

Other leading riders who will return this summer will be Steve Treasure, Terry Liphm, John Watson, Luke Myles, Jerry Richards, and John Ward.

Most of the top trainers from both the summer and winter meetings, including Blane Schvaneveldt, Gary Sherlock, D. Wayne Lukas, Larry Kleve, Rodney Hart, George Liblin and Earl K. Holmes are returning to Los Alamitos.

More About Weiskopf

Ohio, said he has "learned a lot" this year. "I've worked hard and it paid off," he said.

Weiskopf started the afternoon with a birdie on the 422-yard, par four first hole, then had successive birdies on 7, 8 and 9.

On the first hole, he hit a seven iron to within four feet. On No. 7 he hit within 12 feet, and on No. 8 and No. 9 to within three feet.

On the back nine, Weiskopf bogied the 349-yard No. 14 hole when he hit a sand wedge shot into the back bunker, then birdied No. 16 to wrap things up.

Weiskopf lost last week to Jack Nicklaus, who did not play in the Kemper, by two strokes and said he was confident he could beat Nicklaus in the future.

"I'm not afraid of anybody," he said. "When I'm playing my best I can beat anyone and that includes Nicklaus."

He said he would lay off the tour next week and practice for the U.S. Open.

Wadkins, who started the day tied for second with Still at 11-under, said he was "very pleased with my finish."

Winner of this year's Byron Nelson Classic, Wadkins said "I wouldn't have believed I could shoot 14-under here."

"Now I know how Tom felt last week," he said, referring to Weiskopf's loss to Nicklaus to Weiskopf's 14-under-par. "I don't think anyone could shoot any better than he did today."

The selling of the athlete, 1973

By JOAN RYAN

Television commercials featuring professional athletes used to be a 90-second pause of embarrassing ineptitude. Fans flinched as their heroes appeared on camera holding a product aloft with a shaking hand. The usually penetrating eyes of a top-rated quarterback would zig-zag nervously over the teleprompter lines and voices that barked the signals authoritatively would drone on in flat regional accents.

Who can forget Fran Tarkenton and his wife preaching the virtues of canned stew with soft, Southern tones? Or Bobby Hull chasing the puck across the ice, his face smeared with still-moist shaving cream? Or Wilt Chamberlain, slouched in a small chair, faking weighty thoughts on the merits of an after-shave lotion?

A few years ago there was an abrupt turnabout in commercials featuring athletes. A possible inspiration for the new look in TV ads might have been Joe Namath's hefty contract to shave off his Fu Manchu mustache and goatee. Fans sat glued to their TV loungers for a whole football season waiting for a glimpse of Namath's shaven face. But the commercial was never shown.

Rumors ran rampant. Did the on-camera shave reveal some mountainous hickey on Joe's cleft chin? Or did cool Joe flub his lines as he took the last fatal swipe?

Although the commercial was canned, the interest it created set the Manhattan ad men into motion and they began to show the athlete, not as an amateur-turned-pro broadcaster, but as himself: warts, hickeys and all.

So we were treated to Len Dawson and John Brodie joshing in mock battle over the attributes of razor blades. O. J. Simpson was caught enjoying his cola drink so much that he dribbled it down his chin. Dave DeBusschere turned up in the Knicks' shower sneaking a little hair color on his sideburns.

And best of all, Bill Russell did a pitch for long distance. The script called for him to shoot and miss a basket with his admonishment, "You can't miss with long distance." But he goofed everytime sinking one shot after another. The final commercial records his delightful high-pitched cackle and the ad lib, "I can't miss! . . . and neither can you with long distance."

Combining the au naturel theme with newly liberated women was the next logical step. The newest rage in sports commercials features a luscious but casual New York model, Victoria Medlin. She swishes down the aisle in the Miami Dolphins' dressing room, giving lineman Larry Little a hand in removing his jersey.

Victoria gives her pitch about a hair grooming product, tossing Lady Godiva locks as evidence. On her way out, she casts a businesslike look at Bob Griese, fresh from the shower. "Nice game, Bob," she says crisply, giving him a smart slap on the rump.

Well! The fans love it. And Victoria has now invaded the Cincinnati Reds' locker room. She sprays Pete Rose's locks with her aerosol can and surveys the result with a long-lashed critical eye. "Now work on the gut," she advises the startled Rose, smacking him on the belly with the back of her delicate hand.

Whether the shock value of seeing a lissome young woman roaming an all-male sanctuary and reeling off locker room jargon will sell the product remains to be seen. But the Medlin commercials are a sure-fire improvement on those oldtimers. Like the one of John Unitas taking a snap from center and fading to pass with his dancing feet clad in support socks.

INGLEWOOD—Two of the leaders of the wide-open Hollywood Park three-year-old division, Rod and Expression, head a list of 14 sophomore colts and geldings named to the $60,000 added Argonaut Handicap next Saturday.

Other outstanding nominees to the mile-and-one-sixteenth Derby steppingstone include Turley Lane, Gold Bag and Out Of The East.

Rod, racing for Leone Peters, last appeared in the Westwood stakes on the turf, winning that mile-and-one-sixteenth event by a length-and-one-half in 1:42.45. Argonaut nominees Lucky Hayes and Carry The Banner finished behind the dark bay son of Bold Lad.

Gophers Grab District Title

CARBONDALE, Ill. (UPI) — Minnesota came out of a pileup at home plate Sunday with a 7-6 victory over Southern Illinois University and the championship of the NCAA District 4 playoffs.

The win means the Big Ten champions advance to the College World Series at Omaha, June 8-14.

Gophers pitcher Dennis Allar, who was credited with the win, was on third in the bottom of the 14th inning when Joe Comer hit a ground ball to Saluki shortstop Stan Mann, who threw home to catcher Larry Calusetti. Calusetti threw a heavy block at Allar, racing in from third, flipping him into the air, but dropped the ball in the process allowing the Minnesota pitcher to score.

Lionettes Split

Shirley Topley scored on a single by Mickey Davis in the fourth inning of the second game of a doubleheader to give the Orange Lionettes a 1-0 win over the Sun City Saints and a split of their four-game series Sunday.

Orange fell, 4-0 in the first game as home runs by Marlene Rau and Ginger Kurtz did the damage.

Orange is 4-2 in PCSLA action Friday with a doubleheader against Sacramento at Hart Park beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Kinlund Hired

SAN MARCOS, Tex. (UPI) — Neal Kinlund has been named assistant basketball coach and head tennis coach at Southwest Texas State. Kinlund and Mike Pinkham were fired from Bob Prewitt's basketball staff at SMU at the end of last season.

Valdez Could Be Best 'Bug' Boy

It was almost a year ago that newly-turned 16-year-old apprentice rider burst on the scene at Hollywood Park and rode both ends of the daily-double with only the second and third mounts of this career.

Steve Valdez arrived early and he plans to stay late.

Valdez, at the moment, is not only the leading apprentice rider at Hollywood Park, but also is boldly challenging the likes of Laffit Pincay and Alvaro Pineda for the top spot in the jockey standings.

"I have only two goals," the native of Monrovia reveals. "First, I want to win the national apprentice title this year and secondly, I want to break Rudy Rosales' Hollywood apprentice record of 67 wins in one season."

In less than a year, Valdez has proven beyond a doubt that he's here to stay.

One-Track Mind

"It feels unbelievably good to be where I am," Steve admits. "I like to ride horses and that's all I think about."

Valdez had one of the more auspicious starts among modern day riders.

"I had galloped horses since I was eight," he recalls. "Actually, most of it was done undercover since to receive an exercise boy's license you're supposed to be 16."

"I finally got that license the day I turned 16, and several days later I rode my first race."

Valdez still vividly recalls the day he rode both ends of a $256 daily double for trainer Lou Glauburg.

"I didn't really know whether either horse had a chance," he says. "All I know is that I was just thrilled to be riding. I was a nervous wreck and then when I got back to the jock's room, I got the paint job. I think Shoe-maker was the one. He had it all over me."

How to Hit Ground

In his first year of riding, Valdez has learned a multitude of lessons, including how to hit the ground when a horse falls.

"I had a tough summer," said Steve somberly. "I had a collapsed lung, three broken ribs and a cracked collarbone in one spill and then later, during the Oak Tree meet, I lost my spleen, broke three vertebrae and five ribs."

Right now, horses are the only thing on his mind.

Fraud Investigated In NM Track Sales

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M., investigator to probe Coen's (UPI) — The New Mexico Racing Commission said it will investigate the proposed purchase of two New Mexico horse racing tracks by a man who has been accused of fraud by the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC).

Mike J. Coen of Kansas City, the president of All-American Turf, reached an agreement to purchase majority interest in Ruidoso Downs and Sunland Park from Kodiak Industries, Inc., it was announced last month.

Coen was named in an SEC, civil complaint filed Thursday in U.S. district court in San Diego along with financier C. Arnhold Smith and several corporations.

"I'm going to make sure (Coen) has been thoroughly checked and I feel very strong about a thorough investigation," said racing commissioner George Maloof Friday.

Maloo also said the commission would ask the attorney general's office to appoint an investigator to probe Coen's background. Under a new law passed by the 1973 Legislature, the transfer of a racing license to Coen would require Racing Commission approval.

Commissioner Herman Tabet said the proposed sale "will definitely be investigated, one way or the other. I have been dubious to start with and I'm sure we're going to take a long, hard look at it."

The SEC complaint alleged that Coen, Smith and Phillip A. Tofet of San Diego violated numerous securities laws, primarily spinning off assets of publicly owned firms to benefit companies held privately by the defendants.

"We have to see how involved Mike Coen is in this SEC suit," (Coen) has been thoroughly checked and I feel very strong about a thorough investigation," said racing commissioner George Maloof Friday.

S. Vietnam Eyes Foreign Money

SAIGON (UPI)—South Vietnam hopes to attract foreign investment by being even more liberal than Singapore, Bangkok, Thailand or Taiwan, government officials say.

"Investors want to know when the guns have fallen silent," one official said. "In the boardrooms in New York and Paris, they are scared."

"So we can't rely on conventional measures - doing what Singapore, Thailand and Taiwan are doing. We can't afford to wait. We want people to come now."

"What Singapore is doing, we have to do better. . . the investment climate here is poorer than in Singapore so our terms must be more liberal."

They said measures to encourage foreign investment include government underwriting such investments, extending credit for local expenditures in South Vietnamese piasters, declaring a moratorium period for taxes on profits and cutting out red tape for sending profits home.

Schultz Backs Superport Plan

WASHINGTON (UPI)—U.S. superport construction can help avert employment and investment transfers to the Bahamas and Canada, Treasury Secretary George P. Schultz says.

Schultz summarized and supported the Nixon energy legislation intended to promote more domestic refinery construction, domestic oil and gas exploration and minimize balance of payments impact of increasing needs for imported energy resources.

U.S. Changes Sugar Quotas

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Agriculture Department has announced a series of changes in 1973 sugar quotas with increases for some countries to make up for short supplies in United States and some other producing areas.

Officials said deficits, or quota reductions, were formally proclaimed at 20,000 tons for Puerto Rico, 100,232 tons for the West Indies, 15,889 tons for Panama, and 12,259 tons for Honduras.

In addition, smaller cuts in quotas for several other countries were announced to make up for earlier actions adjusting the Hawaiian quota.

Banker Warns On Consumer Movement

Public Needs Can't Be Postponed, New CBA Chief Says

Norman Barker Jr., newly elected president of the California Bankers Association, Saturday in San Francisco told his fellow bankers that "we should be cautious about underestimating the importance" of consumer groups and the consumer movement.

UCB Chief Talks

Barker made his remarks in his acceptance speech as the new CBA president before more than 600 bankers attending the 32nd annual convention of the CBA.

"Unlike some other social issues which bankers can afford to postpone in their day-to-day activities, consumerism goes to the heart of our business. It raises questions about our ability to carry out our fundamental task—providing goods and services at a reasonable cost to our customers," Barker, who is chairman of the board and chief executive officer of United California Bank, said.

In light of the tremendous growth of consumer credit in general and the fact that it represents about 20 per cent of total disposable income nationwide, Barker noted that the bankers should not "label the consumer movement as anti-business."

"Rather, it would seem that

The Register BUSINESS - FINANCE

the American consumer is experiencing a good deal of confusion at being confronted with thousands of different products, competing claims and exhortations to spend."

Barker urged the bankers to find better and more simple ways to explain credit policies and loan procedures.

As a first step in this direction, the new president said, the CBA task force report on national consumer finance proposals had made some positive recommendations in response to the growing concern in this area.

He pointed out that "the advantages of a forward-looking policy in the highly-sensitive consumer area would be to gain greater confidence of the customer and to forestall government intervention by demonstrating to lawmakers that we are fully aware of our customer needs and have every intention of supplying the kind of services and fair treatment they demand."

In another field, Barker spoke about the growth of competition from foreign banks in the American financial community.

"Let me say," Barker noted, "that we are not attempting to discourage competition, (but) all we are asking is fairness—fairness on the part of other countries in allowing the same privileges that we allow foreign banks and fairness from our own regulatory agencies."

Oil Industry 'Welcomes' FTC Probe

Frank N. Ikard, president of the American Petroleum Institute, has issued the following statement in response to Sen. Henry Jackson's, D-Wash., call for a study by the Federal Trade Commission of the current energy shortage.

In a letter to FTC chairman Lewis A. Engman, Jackson urged that the regulatory agency issue a report within 30 days on whether the nation's major oil companies are attempting to seize total control of the gasoline market.

"The petroleum industry welcomes any objective study and report on the causes and nature of the current energy shortage, and the structure of the petroleum industry. We have been trying for more than three years to alert and interest government officials and others in the growing fuels supply situation. And we believe an objective study will put to rest once and for all the unfounded charges that the fuel shortage has been contrived."

"Let me, for now, comment on two points in Senator Jackson's letter to the FTC chairman—

1. "There is an implication in the letter that the petroleum industry is making exorbitant profits. This is not so. Over the past 10 years, the oil industry has on average been less profitable than the average for manufacturing as a whole. The industry's profitability in the first quarter of 1973 is up considerably over the same quarter of 1972, but the first three months of 1972 was a period of depressed earnings, which particularly affected the oil industry."

2. "Independent retail gasoline marketers, far from being driven out of business, increased their share of the market in 1972."

Texaco Inc. says that the government's voluntary program for allocation of crude oil and refinery products should "provide the flexibility needed to minimize the im-cal volume relationship among customer groups, a company spokesman said. "We also believe that within our plan we can give special consideration to essential-service customers," the spokesman said.

Under the Mobil allocation plan, automotive gasoline customers will be supplied at a rate based on their 1972 purchases. Distillates (kerosene, diesel fuels and heating oil) will be supplied at a rate based on purchases between April 1, 1972, and March 31, 1973.

The spokesman said that Mobil is manufacturing and marketing petroleum products at the highest rates in its history. "Recent sales, however, have greatly exceeded forecast growth rates," he said, "and in order to treat all our customers on a fair and reasonable basis, we found it necessary to introduce an allocation system."

Employment in California should rise by almost 2.5 per cent during 1973, slightly above the 1972 gain.

STATUS OF LEGISLATION

advertising of prescription drug prices and requiring pharmacies to post prices for the 100 most frequently prescribed drugs has been approved, 11-6, by the Assembly Ways and Means Committee and sent to the floor. The measure (AB674) is sponsored by Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti, D-Van Nuys.

RENT—Two bills (AB102-03) aimed at revising California's century-old landlord-tenant laws to give renters a greater voice and greater control in housing affairs have been shelved in the Assembly Judiciary Committee at the request of their author, Assemblyman Charles Warren, D-Los Angeles. Warren said the measures would be given further study this fall.

NO FAULT—The Assembly Ways and Means Committee has approved a no-fault automobile insurance bill restricting lawsuits to "pain and suffering." The measure (AB801) by Assemblyman John F. Foran, D-San Francisco, went to the Assembly floor on a 17-1 vote with the support of the California Trial Lawyers, who have vociferously opposed other no-fault proposals. Written into the measure is a 15 per cent reduction in insurance premium costs.

INSURANCE—The Assembly has passed, 68-0, and sent to the Senate a bill (AB379) by Assemblyman Daniel E. Boatright, D-Concord, prohibiting insurance companies from charging higher rates for firemen, highway patrolmen and other peace officers involved in an accident while on duty.

SMOG—The Senate has passed on a minimum, 21-1, vote a measure calling for a seven-month delay in the scheduled July 1 start-up date for a program requiring 1966-70 model cars to be fitted with new smog control devices. The measure (SCR52) by Sen. John Holmdahl, D-Oakland, was sent to the Assembly. Not affected are cars being newly registered.

Mortgage, Drug, No Fault Bills Clear Panels

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—The status of major legislation of interest to business:

SMOKE—The Assembly Ways and Means Committee has turned back a bill requiring restaurants, bars, theaters, hospitals and public meeting halls to have special nonsmoking areas. The measure (AB202) by Assemblyman John V. Briggs, R-Fullerton, was rejected on a 7-8 vote but Briggs asked that it be reconsidered later.

TAX—A bill delaying until July 1 the scheduled June 1 sales tax increase from five to six per cent has been signed into law by Gov. Ronald Reagan. The measure (AB137) was sponsored by Assemblyman Joe A. Gonsalves, D-La Mirada. Rival Republican and Democratic plans for a longer delay are still pending in the legislature.

REFEED—The Senate has approved, 26-1, and sent to the Assembly a bill (SB428) by Sen. Anthony Beilenson, D-Beverly Hills, which would make it a crime for a firm to receive "kickbacks" for referring patients to another business or doctor for medical services. Beilenson said the measure was aimed at abortion referral abuses.

MORTGAGE—The Senate Business and Professions Committee has approved, 5-0, and sent to the floor watered down "reform" legislation aimed at curbing abuses in the vast California mortgage loan broker industry. Sponsored by Sens. James Whetmore, R-Buena Park, and George Deukamjian, R-Long Beach, the measure (SB304) deals only with second mortgage loans arranged by mortgage loan brokers. It would prevent "pyramiding" and limit late payments as well as ban "balloon payments" and "interest-only" loans with terms of six years or less. As initially proposed it would have set tougher limits on "balloon payments."

TRADING TABLE — Markets in foreign exchange are often made at a frantic pace. For foreign exchange traders at Bank of America's International Banking Office in San Francisco, dealing with a torrent of calls from brokers and customers is made easier by a trading table designed with their needs in mind. Multiple telephone lines and built-in calculators at arm's level enable speedy service, and side-by-side seating facilities direct communication among traders.

Misconceptions About Inflation

By GERALD M. LOEB
NEW YORK (NANA) — We are inundated with lip service about the perils of inflation. Most people would like to deflate the prices of what they buy but are not against inflating prices of what they sell!

Along with this "do nothing" lip service, we also hear and read a great deal of misinformation.

Not so long ago, politicians and others were saying that the devaluation of the dollar and the corresponding increase in the price of gold would only increase the prices of what we bought abroad. Now everyone knows that domestic prices are higher as well.

There are many more misconceptions. A great many were brought out in a very long address delivered by Dr. A. Schaefer, chairman of the board, Union Bank of Switzerland at their ordinary general meeting on March 21, 1973. His remarks have been printed and have just reached the United States in the form of a 22-page pamphlet.

He begins by quoting Lehrs' "Nowhere is property secure." We have so much of "safe" investments that we must conclude that their savings are always in jeopardy. The optimum safety can only be secured by realizing this and adjusting and readjusting to changing times.

Dr. Schaefer points out that the guarantees of the economic and social security most people believe we have achieved are a mere illusion. The cancer of inflation not only decreases the value of monetary assets, wages and social benefits but also undermines the foundations of a liberal social order.

Dr. Schaefer asks whether Lenin will be proved right when he said "capitalism will destroy itself and that its destruction will begin with the collapse of its currency."

Another misconception is belief in interest tables which show that with an assumed interest rate such as six per cent, one could double one's capital in 12 years. To be realistic, such tables need to be adjusted to the erosion created by taxes and the loss in monetary values.

It is a delusion to think that inflation has permanent benefits. Although inflation in its initial stage can stimulate the economy, it is quite obvious that over the long term its negative effects on the economy and the general prosperity of the nation by far outweigh its positive ones.

"This is demonstrated by the experience of those nations, such as Great Britain, which have for some time recorded both a high rate of inflation as well as a high rate of unemployment."

can always be maintained by the immediate investment in so-called real value." He touches on the risks in buying works of art, stamps and coins.

As to real estate, he says "even the tried and true method of protecting one's capital through real estate has lost some of its earlier glow, not only because of the high cost of land, but also because of the increasing government intervention in the freedom to do with property what one wishes through zoning laws, capital gains taxes, rent ceilings, increased taxation on capital assets and so forth."

Distorted corporate accounting comes in for discussion. "Companies should take into consideration the effects of inflation on their balance sheets and income statements in respect of replacement costs, because what appear to be earnings may in fact be losses.

"The management of a company should not be evaluated solely in terms of nominal results, but to a greater extent on the basis of real growth and a policy that deals with prices, financing and dividends in real terms."

He discusses the error in believing in "controlled inflation," which merely postpones the day of reckoning.

Whereas a businessman must pay for his mistakes, the politician is never punished for his financial demagoguery. Nevertheless, even the state is not an ultimate beneficiary of inflation. It may seem that the real value of its debts are reduced and its tax revenues increase, but, in the long run, in welfare economics taxes become virtually confiscatory and destroy incentives.

No panaceas are given whereby the investor might offset losses through inflation. Obviously, he can lose less in some forms of investment than in others.

The effective ways to combat inflation seem almost unachievable. They begin with a change of peoples' mentality. They include elimination of hindrances to foreign trade and the promotion of competition. There are many major policies of unions that need to be altered. Fundamentally, many policies of government need to be changed.

The final misconception is that prescribed price and wage freezes will do the trick. Dr. Schaefer points out that as far back as the year 1445 they were applied without success.

We must understand that even the supposedly worst nation cannot spread "paper prosperity" and introduce one "social measure" after another without suffering serious consequences.

long-term issues currently yield only a quarter point more than last year.

This situation is because of an only light demand for long-term funds by corporations. Reason: availability of low-cost bank loans. But there's a change in the making, and within the next few months.

Because of the continued business boom, there's no near-term likelihood of the Federal Reserve relaxing its tighter-money attitude. The Fed's order for banks to increase reserve requirements will slow the available money flow for corporate loans.

The bank higher prime rate on loans hasn't reached peak. What it spells out is corporations coming into the open market for long-term borrowing — for expansion needs. Banking opinion is the odds are three to two that long-term money market rates will rise further in the months immediately ahead.

Business Cycle

In the 22 peacetime economic expansion phases from 1954 to 1961, the average length of expansion—from the low-point of the preceding recession to the peak of the expansion—was 26 months, according to a bank economist.

Inflation gets major thinking among corporate and banking middle executives and those making job changes. They aren't seeking all of increased wages in cash. Reason: taxes will dig into it. They want company cars, company trips, company club memberships and company working offices in their own homes.

Important people in the financial community know that before former Treasury Secretary John Connally accepted the post as White House aide, he had visits with the top men of a half-dozen New York big banks and a half-dozen heads of nationally respected securities underwriting houses.

As a result of these talks he accepted President Nixon's assignment to prepare new rigid wage-price controls. Each told Connally, in effect: stop the inflation or we are headed for a deep recession soon.

Also, at these talks, Connally mentioned his great love — the oil industry and companies related in that field. There are billions of dollars of contracts in the making for off-shore drilling, transportation of petroleum, etc.

Moreover, in addition to possibly picking up a few choice clients for his Texas law firm, it might be worth mentioning he was making financial friends for the future — like 1976?

$500 BILLION AT STAKE

Global Biz: It Takes Schooling

By DEAN C. MILLER
UPI Business Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — The great global gold rush for the 500 billion business generated by multinational companies is accelerating daily.

In Japan, 56,000 businessmen and students are studying English.

In London, native German and French teachers are in short supply. Some 80 British businessmen recently took crash courses in Chinese because of the thaw in Peking. Foreign language schools are booked solid until autumn.

In a suburb of Phoenix, at a former U.S. Air Force base that trained World War II pilots to fight the Nazis and Japanese, a unique American school trains business executives and potential executives to fight for the multinational pot of gold, which today accounts for one sixth of the world's gross national product.

The Thunderbird Graduate School of International Management at Glendale, Ariz., is the only graduate school in the U.S. devoted exclusively to educating men and women for international management careers. Its curriculum demands knowledge of business techniques and cultural make-ups in foreign countries plus a conversational knowledge of a second language.

Korea, Japan and France have set up schools copied after Thunderbird.

On May 25 Thunderbird will graduate 99 men and women from 32 states and 18 foreign countries. After being culled by swarms of recruiters from multinational American corporations, the graduates will spread out over the world to mine the foreign trade gold.

Since the school was founded in 1946 on the 180-acre site of the former Thunderbird AFB, more than 2,600 business, government, social and educational organizations have hired more than 7,000 Thunderbird graduates. Many of them now important executives, those graduates work in some 100 countries and territories from Angola and Belgium to the Virgin Islands and Zambia.

Each semester 100 or more multinational firms send recruiters to the school. Of Fortune's 500 largest companies 267 have hired graduates off the Glendale campus.

The average salary offered has been $12,900 but offers ranged up to $20,000. Seven engineer undergraduates who decided to bend their careers toward business management had as many as five job offers apiece before their graduations. Fifty-five per cent of the December 22 class had jobs at the time they received their Masters in Management (MIM) degree. Six months later 99 per cent of them had been placed.

Because of such placement success the school's enrollment has risen 62 per cent since 1967. By March, 1972, Thunderbird had enrolled students from every state, 56 countries, 1009 U.S. college and universities, and another 247 from foreign universities. One is Han Soo Kim, a retired general in the Korean marine corps, who will be graduated this month.

"It was the right school at the right time to do the right things," said President William Voris who taught in or headed business and management curricula at the University of Arizona and California State University of Los Angeles and served as professor or consultant in Saudi Arabia, Korea, Lebanon and Iran before taking over at Thunderbird in 1971. "It also is a school that bends with the times."

Its tripartite curriculum consists of courses in World Business (practical aspects of international finance and business management in foreign countries), International Studies (the cultural background of foreign countries), and Modern Languages (conversational proficiency in at least one foreign language). Foreign students attending Thunderbird take English as a second language.

A MIN degree is awarded upon successful completion of 48 semester hours during three regular semesters or two semesters and a summer session. Total cost per student runs around $6,100, including room and board. Companies often pick up the tab if they want a promising employee to pick up skills in their overseas operations.

A non-degree course to prepare corporate executives and their wives for overseas duties was established in 1951. So far 600 executives and many wives anxious "to fit in smoothly" have taken the six or eight week "cram" course. A six week session costs $2,400 for the man and $1,800 for the wife, including room and board, cassette players, tapes and books.

Strong men have been known to groan in frustration and their wives to break into hysterical tears as they study, literally, day and night to learn a second language in that short time. "But we lose very few of them," Dr. Voris said. "And they eventually thank us for forcing them to learn the language of the country to which they are going."

Average age of the Thunderbird student is 26. Sixty per cent of them come directly from graduate school. Forty per cent are married when they enroll. About 8 per cent are women and about 20 per cent from a foreign country.

Class sizes range from one in the individual research courses to a maximum of eight in language conversation courses and 200 or more in some lecture courses.

faculty members are of foreign birth and some are retired corporation executives.

Dr. Voris restructured the faculty when he took over two years ago.

"We've added some bright young squirts as a mix with the more experienced teachers," Dr. Voris said. "We wanted to get the realists as well as the theoreticians. It did stir up some jealousies and worries. But I like that. It gives our students the advantage of learning from the pragmatist as well as the Ph.D."

Has Dr. Voris noticed any trends in the quickening race for multinational dominance?

"Japanese is coming up a fast as a second language," he said, "Spanish is dropping off. Brazil still attracts U.S. capital, but the other South American countries seem to be losing ground according to the recruiting we see. Probably because of their political problems."

Thunderbird, a non-profit school accredited by the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools as a Master's Degree graduate school, is helped financially by the business community.

While it derives 85 per cent of its costs from tuitions, the other 5 per cent and funds needed for expansion and retirement of debt comes from corporations and interested individuals.

"We have about 60 faithful corporate supporters," Dr. Voris said. "Our affiliation with the American Management Association (AMA) is a security blanket. Each year it gives a chair worth $18,000 and its contributions over the last 10 years has run about $300,000. So we are running in the black and retiring debt at a rapid rate."

Dr. Voris said he and other school officials visit about 500 campuses annually to spread the word about Thunderbird.

The school's board of directors includes Sen. Barry M. Goldwater of Arizona, Lowell Thomas, author and news commentator, and active or retired presidents and board chairmen from such companies as IBM World Trade Corp., Motorola, Goodyear International Corp. and PepsiCo International.

There has been talk about changing the name of the school from Thunderbird to something more identified with business and trade.

"But American Indians regarded the 'Thunderbird' as a god responsible for peace, brotherhood and prosperity," explained Dr. Voris. "Apparently the business world also does, so we hesitate about making a change."

Two Objectives Just Fine—But Keep Priority Straight

By ELIOT JANEWAY

Q. What are the relative merits, in the long term, of investment in debt instruments and equities for the individual who wants to have both income and gains, insofar as the two are compatible? Mr. J. K. W. (Chicago)

A. Fortunately, the two objectives are compatible. But the way to reconcile them during any period of money trouble marked by rising interest rates is to give a priority to debt instruments, and to be content to wait on a return to stability to make an equity play.

Taking at face value my thesis that the prices at which securities sell tend to capitalize the income returns they pay in hard cash, the investors in income again and again wind up enjoying the best of both worlds. While interest rates are up, they get paid rich rates of return.

The moment interest rates come down, investors in income find themselves stuck with rich profits.

Q. I am a widow of 65 with no dependents. I have $300,000 invested in municipal bonds, a land contract which pays me $2,000 a month — enough for my living expenses — and $80,000 in a savings account earning 5 per cent interest. Could you suggest a better investment for the greater part of the money in the bank? Mrs. W. Z. (Southfield, Mich.)

A: Your question is realistic and suggests it own answer. No more than $20,000 in savings would give you sufficient security as a reserve against any need to budget for health costs at your time of life. But you would do well to be ready to pay out at least this much in hard cash to meet either the high cost of a medical emergency or the higher cost of continuing medical care for a chronic condition.

Meanwhile, subject to your remaining in good health, you are indeed oversaving. The safest way to increase your income would be to move something like $60,000 from your savings account into a package of utility stocks and deep discount bonds. Ask the broker who sold you your municipals to give you a list of these issues brought out when interest rates were lower. Thanks to the lower coupons they bear, they sell at discounts under their contractual redemption values. Although investors in them under current market conditions sacrifice a bit of current income, they are assured of cashing in substantial capital gains as maturity approaches.

I am worried about your large holding of municipal bonds. Switching out of any of them with maturities of longer than five years strikes me as a greater urgency for you than investing your surplus savings. Taking your losses now on any long-term tax exempts would enable you to register capital losses for tax purposes while, at the same time, insuring you against still further capital losses without subjecting you to any significant loss of income.

Q: I am a reader of the Philadelphia Inquirer, but I buy the Allentown Sunday Call Chronicle just to get your column. I own three issues of fairly good grade utility bonds — two AAs yielding 9 1/4% and 9 per cent respectively, and one BBB yielding 8 1/4% per cent. When I tried to buy some more, my broker suggested that I put the money into a bond fund instead. Should I? Mr. P. U. (Mount Pocono, Pa.)

A: Seems to me that you're pretty well on your own. I see no reason for you not to keep on doing exactly more of the same on your own. Of course, all utility bonds — regardless of their ratings — are good for their interest and can be trusted to avoid default at maturity.

As to the argument you have been having with your broker, as you know, I have been the principal public proponent of bond funds. One consideration I have been frank to urge in their favor is that they enable securities salesmen to earn a full stock exchange commission for steering the amateur bond buyer away from the complications which make the bond market such a tricky turf. But for a bond shopper with your experience and record, I see no reason for not playing the do-it-yourself game. The commission cost saved by buying bonds directly, instead of through a bond fund, is meaningful.

In recent months, the spread between lower-rated and higher-rated bonds has been unusually narrow. But interest rates are on their way up again; and, as they rise, the spread will widen again between lower and higher-rated bonds. I have no doubt that, this next time around, you will have an opportunity to average yields on your BBB utility bonds up above the yield basis on which you were shrewd enough to accumulate your AA bonds. I regard the growing number of utility bond issues being downgraded by the credit rating agencies as an opportunity; even though it does measure the toll inflation is taking of the earning power of utilities. The consumer, however, and not the bondholder, will foot the bill. When and as the yield spread widens again between BBB and AA bonds, the rewards offered will be real, and the risks run will not be.

Frightening Spy Plan

If the Watergate scandal does nothing else for the American people, it has at least provided us with an opportunity to recognize the willingness of powerful politicians to violate the nation's laws and to violate individual rights to serve their own political purpose.

Like most big issues which are kicked around by partisan politicians, Watergate has required the principals to make statements designed to justify whatever involvement they may have had.

Such a statement was made by President Nixon citing national security as the reason for his involvement in the probe of Watergate.

This has created a new tangent in the muddled affair and it is one which shows a greater threat to American freedom than the basic issue, that of one set of politicians spying on another set.

Sen. Sam Ervin is quoted as saying about what he called Nixon's intelligence plan, "It would be a great shock to the people if it were released."

Sen. Ervin claims Nixon proposed to spy on any Americans who did not agree with the administration. If this is what the plan called for, it is the most damaging of all charges against the President. It should have the people enraged and there should be wholesale demand for fast release of information. Sen. Ervin seems to believe will substantiate his charge.

It is possible that Sen. Ervin has read more into the documents he so far chooses not to make public than he should. But this is all the more reason for a public demand for full disclosure.

Power All Around Us

With the price of fuel oil and gasoline going up, a space scientist proposed the use of windmills to generate electric power. We suppose we shall soon hear a suggestion for the harnessing of the ocean tides for the same purpose. Well, don't laugh these ideas off just yet. After all, wind drives the mills and pumps of Holland. Wind pumps the water for the cattle that graze on the Western plains. At one time wind provided the energy for primitive direct-current generators of American farms.

As to the tides, we recall having read of a substantial pilot plant off of Huntington Beach that operated in the early part of this century.

Actually, when you get to thinking the problem out, mankind requires two types of power. One type can be described as stationary power, the energy supplied by the natural gas and the electric utilities. You can call it stationary power, because it is produced through stationary plants. The other type of power can be described as portable. That is the internal combustion engine that drives your car and the diesel engine used for heavy mobile equipment.

What happened in the development of this country's power resources is that we got into a power rut. The fuel for portable power (gasoline and diesel oil) was so plentiful and so economic that there was no point in not using it also for electric generation. In other words, why do things the hard way? As long as plenty of oil was available there was no reason for avoiding the consumption of it.

But now the economics change, partly because of government tinkering and partly of the enormous rate of consumption of petroleum products. So the time has arrived to look at alternatives. Wind is an intermittent force, but any farm boy who has raced across the yard to fold the windmill fan so that the mechanism would not beat itself to death can tell you there's a whole of a lot of power up there. Despite the stop-and-go disadvantages, wind may—with a little inventive genius yet to come—provide auxiliary potential. If it cannot serve as a central power source, it can certainly be helpful for isolated rural situations as was proved by the electric "chargers" of yesteryear.

Unlike the space scientist, however, we won't call for a government appropriation so that law clerks and technicians can draw a paycheck as they debate. What we say is, refrain from encouraging politicians to interfere in the matter. Do what you can to let the profit motive operate. You can rest assured that if somebody can make a dollar by providing you with electric power more cheaply than same can be supplied by current means, you will get the power you need. There is no substitute for incentive, and individual reward is an incentive acclaimed both in heaven and earth.

Box

Question No. 2017: The politicians in Sacramento now are talking about establishing a unicameral legislature for California. Would this not be an improvement over the present two-house legislature?

Answer: As long as the edicts of the courts are being accepted docilely by the legislators, we see no reason why they should not go ahead with a one-house legislature as proposed. Whether it should have 80, 100 or 120 members is not particularly important. We suspect that the politicians will go for the larger number, so all incumbents will have a chance to continue in office.

There was a specific reason for the two-house legislature in California. The Assembly was based on population, under the state Constitution, while the Senate was based largely on area. It was modeled after the federal system.

But Earl Warren's court with its so-called "one-man, one-vote" theory, aided and abetted by the California Supreme Court of Edmund G. Brown appointees, ruled that both houses must be based on population, despite the fact there is no constitutional basis for such a ruling.

It would seem that the state might as well abandon the fiasco it has in the Legislature, with different sets of politicians representing the same people, and using their positions of power in the Senate and Assembly to build their campaigns for higher office. They still would be trying to build their power, but would not likely to have so many opportunities if there were only one unit with one set of officers.

There might be some increase in efficiency, if that is important, by eliminating duplicate hearings before double sets of committees and before two different groups representing the same people.

However, we suspect the public would still find that those in office were promoting their own interest rather than those of the people. That is the way of government.

22nd AMENDMENT

The constitutional processes of a free Republic are probably the ultimate in achievement of man in his march toward that high plateau of civilization. The Magna Carta of the English represented a long stride forward in establishing freedom and preserving the dignity of individuals. The men and women who founded this nation accomplished even more. They laid down for history and the people who would live under it a magnificent plan for personal liberty and a government that would work for the people.

From time to time, challenges to that liberty and that government have emerged, but fortunately there were provisions for amending the U.S. Constitution to deal with them. No one wanted a President to own the White House. That fine old residence belonged to the people. It still does, thanks to the 22nd No Third Term Amendment to the Constitution.

Rotating occupancy was threatened for awhile, but sentiment began to grow in the late 1940s to limit the tenure of a President. The Congress, in all its wisdom, offered a Constitutional amendment to the people and it was shortly after the decade of the 1950s began that I entered the fight to get the approval of the states. The issue was clear. Should one man be eligible to serve more than two elective terms—a total of eight years? The fight was not an easy one. I threw all of my energies into the campaign, which at times seemed like a long fight with a short stick. Fortunately, the legislators who represented the people in the various states saw the dangers of a possible dictator in the future and the 22nd Amendment, prohibiting a third term, was passed. We must be vigilant in protecting this safeguard to our freedom.

Monthly Pay

Jeanne Collins' recent letter about buying consumer goods on military bases was interesting, but factually incorrect.

She stated that "a serviceman with children who draws $307 a month needs cheaper milk." Come now! There is not a married serviceman in any of our armed services who makes less than $461.70 monthly. This is the total amount that is paid to a married private E-1, and consists of $307.20 basic pay, $105 housing allowance and $49.50 commuted rations. Some servicemen choose to forfeit the quarters allowance and live in free government housing instead, but even in this case the value of the housing is well in excess of $105 monthly by Southern California standards.

Interestingly, this same serviceman will earn $496.80 as a private first class and $592.80 monthly as a lance corporal with only 24 months' service. Some civilians should do as well.

Farm Subsidy

I have just read in the May 22 issue of Awake, a magazine distributed by Jehovah's Witnesses, that last year 12,309 farms in the United States were paid $411.8 million for NOT raising crops. In Hawaii, 11 companies received approximately $10 million for not growing sugar, an average of $1 million for each land owner.

In Texas alone, 5,191 farmers received tax money to the extent of $172 million for not producing wheat, grains, cotton and feed. The list of farmers being paid to keep soil idle includes prison farms, universities, coal companies, an insurance company and an aluminum corporation.

I understand that Hon. W.R. Poage (Tex.), chairman of the House Agriculture and Forestry Committee is highly responsible for this scandal, as well as the Hon. Senator Herman E. Talmage (Ga.), chairman of the Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee.

I fail to see how these two dignified public servants can accommodate their conscience with such a perversion of priority. The people of U.S.A. do not approve this regressive policy, when the prices of meat and other food products keep soaring. (I observe that Hon. Talmage is presently serving on the panel of Senators investigating the "Watergate Affair.")

I understand that Hon. Poage, a man reaching 73, is a cotton grower himself, running the 1,900 acre W. A. Poage estates in his home district. No wonder he likes to keep prices of cotton in the high bracket. Doesn't this situation present an odor of conflict of interest? I understand that their sessions are mostly in secret.

Sorry Move

I recently read an article in The Register of Thursday morning, May 17, in regard to attendance drops in Santa Ana schools. I do not feel that either of the reasons mentioned in the article account for the drop in enrollment but the fact that many parents are so unhappy with the Santa Ana school system that they have and are placing their children in private and parochial schools. Another factor is that the bad reputation that the Santa Ana school system has is, rather than drawing people to Santa Ana, causing people to move to other communities in Orange County.

We have recently moved to the Summerfield Homes in the south end of Santa Ana, and had we realized that the warnings we were receiving regarding the Santa Ana schools were true, it would certainly have influenced our decision to move here.

We are at this time considering removing our children from public schools and placing them in private schools because we are tired of half-day sessions, busing, with absolutely no possibility of a neighborhood school in our area, and experimentation with new types of educational gimmicks which leave much question as to their success.

Perhaps the school board, Mr. Kenney and his staff, should wake up to these problems before there are no students left in Santa Ana schools except those children whose parents have neither the interest or means to take their children out of the schools or their families out of the community.

WHO IS BERNARD FENSTERWALD?

Is 'Get Nixon' Clique Involved In Probe?

By VICTOR LASKY

WASHINGTON (NANA)—The Senate Watergate committee is showing a strange reluctance to probe an allegation that convicted conspirator James McCord Jr. had been converted to an effort aimed at "getting" President Nixon.

The allegation was made by McCord's former lawyer, Gerald Alch, in testimony before the select committee headed by Sen. Sam Ervin, D.N.C. Alch quoted McCord's current attorney, Bernard Fensterwald, as having said several months ago, "We're going after the president of the United States."

Despite this and other sensational testimony impeaching McCord's credibility, Senator Ervin and his chief counsel, Sam Dash, made it clear they had no desire to further go into the matter. A committee source said it amounted to a "battle between lawyers."

Which, of course, it was. But that didn't make it any less important.

Did McCord's new lawyer, Fensterwald, actually say that he and his client were "going after the President of the United States?"

Fensterwald denied he had ever said any such thing, but he refused Alch's challenge to join him in taking a lie detector test. At the same time, Senator Ervin said he was not interested in any such "twentieth century witchcraft."

But Sen. Howard Baker, the ranking Republican on the select committee, thought such tests ought to be taken by Alch, Fensterwald and McCord. Baker observed that the results of the tests would be at least as informative as the extraordinary amount of hearsay evidence that now fills the hearing record.

Several days later, Alch voluntarily submitted himself to a lie detector test. The results demonstrated that he apparently was telling the truth in his two days of testimony.

Fensterwald, on behalf of himself and his client, submitted statements to the committee, presumably refuting Alch's testimony. But neither he nor McCord will be called to the witness stand to answer questions on the subject.

Why Ervin refuses to get to the bottom of the argument is a matter of conjecture. It may well be that the Tarheel senator is of the opinion that the committee ought to begin to concentrate on the main issues at hand.

Nevertheless, as chairman of the Watergate committee, Ervin did permit the record to be cluttered with all kinds of statements which would never have been permitted in any court of law.

And McCord was responsible for most of those statements. He told of things which he admittedly had no first-hand knowledge.

Of considerable interest to certain members of the committee, including Baker, is the role being played by Bernard Fensterwald. Just exactly how did he become involved with James McCord? Why did he help raise the princely sum of $40,000 in bail funds to get McCord out of jail? And where, in the first place, did he get those funds?

And who exactly is Bernard Fensterwald? Around town, he is known as an eccentric lawyer whose main hobby has been to promote further investigations into the assassinations of John F. Kennedy and Martin Luther King Jr. In fact, he set up a special committee aimed at discovering the "truth" about the two tragedies. The presumption behind this activity is that the commission headed by former Chief Justice Earl Warren had done a faulty job in probing President Kennedy's death.

While he denied the statements attributed to him by Alch, Fensterwald has since publicly conceded that as a long-time Democrat he has an interest in going after Mr. Nixon. After all, he claims, the 1972 election was "stolen" by the Republicans.

Exactly how the election was stolen he has yet to say.

Exiled Cubans Distrust Demos; Watergate A New Trojan Horse

By WILLIAM GIANDONI
Copley News Service

Bernard L. Barker, convicted Watergate burglar, speaks English like an educated American, but his thinking is Cuban, anti-communist, anti-Castro Cuban.

To be able to fathom the mind of such a man, 56, a World War II U.S. Air Corps officer, a pre-Castro Cuban police investigator, a veteran of the ill-fated U.S. backed, Cuban exile invasion operation at the Bay of Pigs, you have to try to understand Cubans.

It is not hard. Roughly half a million of them have fled to the United States and elsewhere to escape the Communist yoke that weighs so heavily on the island of their birth.

Give them a chance and they will tell you that Cuba, before Fidel Castro and his bearded minions took over in 1959, was probably the most progressive of the Latin American countries. Its standard of living was among the highest. There was more of everything—autos, radios, refrigerators, all the trappings of material wealth—per thousand people in Cuba than in other Latin nations. The Cuban people were among the most sophisticated in the hemisphere.

Cuba's president then was Gen. Fulgencio Batista, thoroughly disliked by the Cuban intelligentsia, but a man of humble beginnings who did have considerable popular backing.

Particularly during the last few years of his term of office, that should have ended after presidential elections in the spring of 1959, Batista came under more and more criticism by Cuba's free-swinging newspapers.

What with the widespread corruption of his regime, the reported excesses of his police and the wave of sympathy whipped up for such as the guerrillas led by Fidel Castro, public opinion was turned against Batista. When he finally gave up the presidency and fled into exile on New Year's Day 1959, most Cubans danced with joy, so genuine was their relief and satisfaction at the departure of the by-then hated dictator.

At first, there was considerable behind-the-scenes maneuvering among the various anti-Batista revolutionary groups, several of which had borne more of the burden of the bloody struggle than Castro's 26th of July Movement, but nevertheless after a few days Castro emerged, unchallenged, as the supreme leader of the Cuban revolutionary regime.

In the early Castro days, weeks and months, the bearded Fidel repeatedly denied any ties with the communists and most Cubans believed him.

It was only after Castro had been in power almost two years, and the Catholic hierarchy was pressing him for a public pronouncement, that Castro declared Dec. 16, 1960, that "we do believe that to be anti-Communist is to be counter-revolutionary."

By then, though, the U.S.

government had been convinced that the Castro regime was Communist in everything but name, and Cuban exiles were being trained for the invasion that it was hoped would spark the popular uprising that would remove him from power.

That operation at the Bay of Pigs failed. But Castro did, in effect, confirm what the world knew, that his democratic revolution had zig-zagged far left.

In September, 1961, Castro publicly declared that the Cuban revolution had actually turned Marxist "when it converted the sugar centrals, the big factories, the great businesses, the mines, transportation, the banks, etc., into collective property of all the people."

That process really began in 1959, when, on May 11, the confiscatory agrarian reform law was promulgated. Even before, interventions and takeovers of the telephone company, of newspapers and other private property had started. But it was not until July 6, 1960, that the Castro dictatorship decreed a law authorizing the expropriation of all American properties in Cuba.

By the time Castro took to radio and television, late the night of Dec. 1, 1961, and early the following morning to affirm that "I am Marxist-Leninist and I will be Marxist-Leninist to the last day of my life," that he believed in Marxism Jan. 1, 1959, when Batista fled, that he believed July 26, 1953, when he staged the ill-fated attack on the Moncada army barracks in Santiago, that gave his movement its name, no one doubted him.

Over the three years he had been in power, thousands of Cubans were being summarily tried, convicted and executed for alleged war crimes. Enemies of the revolution were jailed on trumped-up charges and in many cases executed.

Many of the people who watched Barker testify before the Senate investigating committee May 24, may not remember much of this. But to the Cuban exile who has relatives, friends and acquaintances still rotting in Castro's jails and prison camps, this is part of the history they are living.

They know, they learned, belatedly, how Cuba was turned into a Communist state.

As Salvador Diaz Verson, a well-known Cuban commentator wrote recently in the Spanish language daily, Diario de las Americas, Miami, Fla., "Watergate is a new 'Trojan Horse'."

"And we Cubans who are in exile and remember how the civic institutions of the nation were smashed in Cuba to install Communism, we have to collaborate with our good brothers in the lands of Washington, shouting to them: Remember Cuba and learn the lesson."

Cubans recall how the Bay of Pigs invasion failed in April, 1961, when, after the exiles landed on Cuba's southern coast President Kennedy canceled the naval air support they had been counting on. Cubans recall how, to ease the missile crisis in October, 1962, Kennedy promised Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev that not only would the United States not allow another attempt to oust Castro to depart from its shores but would see to it that no other country did either. Cubans generally mistrust the Democratic Party.

As Barker put it to the Senate select committee probing the Watergate affair, while he respects Sen. George McGovern, he disagrees with McGovern's "type of philosophy . . . It's the kind I've seen turn Cuba into a communist state . . ."

Kahn Comment.

By KESNER KAHN
You can't understand Americanism until you understand God and His Laws, and you can't understand Communism until you understand the age old rebellion against God and His Laws; which is why so very very few begin to understand what's going on.

Life is like truth and consequences; men and nations who do not recognize The Truth must suffer the consequences.

I'm protesting protest-ers who don't appreciate how lucky they are to be Americans.

Fullerton, Union Slate Meet Tuesday

FULLERTON—A meeting between city and union representatives has been scheduled for 8:30 a.m. Tuesday in the city hall to iron out some disputed issues, said Larry Cass, president of Local 373 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME) affiliated with the AFL-CIO.

The issues for negotiation include a request that the four hours Cass was suspended be restored, that work rules be negotiated before being implemented and that no punitive damage be assessed those employees off work Friday morning in a protest meeting at the city hall, said Cass.

Close to 100 employees from the public works, water and parks and recreation departments jammed into the city hall lobby Friday morning to protest the four-hour suspension of Cass Thursday for attending a meeting on city time without obtaining permission of his department head, Jack L. Royer, director of municipal utilities.

The meeting Thursday was called by the street department supervisor to discuss some rules or requests made regarding the use of city vehicles for lunch period or coffee breaks, said Jay Busse, city personnel officer. The request was that the men in the field do not return to the Basque Avenue yard facility for lunch or coffee breaks unless they were really close. The request was prompted by the gas shortage.

The union members called Cass to the meeting and he came without his supervisor's permission and besides he had no authority to attend the meeting, said Busse. The supervisor had the right to call the meeting to discuss the request with his men, said Busse.

City Administrator William F. Cornett called Cass to his office Thursday afternoon and suspended him for four hours without pay.

A short session was held between union and city officials Friday morning, said Cass who was accompanied by Cliff Bollen, business representative of the AFL-CIO. Another meeting was held Friday afternoon, attended by union attorney Richard Silber.

Cornett told Cass that the grievance could not be negotiated through his office when the union members demanded a meeting with the city administrator. Grievances must be handled through proper channels, not through the administrator, Cornett pointed out.

Cass said that five representatives of the union along with Bollen and Silber will meet with the city officials Tuesday morning.

OCC Planning Guidance Tests

COSTA MESA—Educational, vocational and guidance testing will be conducted at Orange Coast College at 6:30 p.m. June 19 and 20 in the Student Center.

The tests are for those with educational or vocational problems, require two nights and will be followed by an interview or counseling. The tests will cover aptitude, ability, interest and personality.

DEAR ABBY

No Reason For 'Heart-Break'

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1973 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter is 28 and a nurse. She took a job several thousand miles from home and has been gone nearly a year. We were hoping she'd come home last Christmas, but she said she'd come home next summer and bring her fiancé. [She had written about a young man she'd fallen in love with, describing his "beautiful attitudes, brilliant mind, and outstanding character."

Now we know why she didn't bring him home for Christmas. He's an amputee! He lost both legs just below the knee when he stepped on a mine near Saigon. We learned this yesterday from a letter she wrote us.

We are heartsick. She's such a beautiful girl and could easily get a whole man. Abby, how do parents adjust to knowing their daughter will spend the rest of her life caring for an invalid?

HEARTBROKEN PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: What makes you think he's an invalid? You would be amazed how well some people can manage on artificial limbs. There is no reason to be heartbroken. If he's "whole" enough for her it says a great deal for her values. Theirs could be a completely beautiful and fulfilling marriage.

DEAR ABBY: You defined a homosexual as "one who has erotic feelings about members of his [or her] own sex."

It is my understanding that heterosexuals sometimes have erotic feelings about members of their own sex. Am I mistaken? And by the way, do you think homosexuals are "sick"?

CURIOUS IN N. Y.

DEAR CURIOUS: You are correct. In my anxiousness to conserve space I oversimplified. I should have said, "individuals who have STRONG, PREFERENTIAL erotic feelings about members of their own sex can be considered homosexual."

And I most definitely DO NOT consider homosexuals "sick".

DEAR ABBY: Only my mother knows my real age because I've been lying about it for several years. I am engaged to an angel of a man who attributes the smoothness of our relationship to our complete honesty.

Altho I've never lied to my fiancé about anything else, I've repeated that lie about my age dozens of times in his presence, with friends, applying for graduate school, credit cards, etc.

What I want your advice on is this: Must my fiancé ever know my real age? It would be so embarrassing to tell him now. He thinks he's two years older than me, when actually he is two months younger.

OLDER WOMAN

DEAR WOMAN: Tell him and tell him now. Not only for your own peace of mind but in anticipation of the day you'll be eligible for Social Security. ("Oh, what a tangled web we weave when first we practice to deceive.")

CONFIDENTIAL TO: Those who are interested in reading a delightful little book with a big message about the purpose of life—beg, buy or borrow "Celebrate the Sun" by James Kavanaugh.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L. A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

For Abby's new booklet, "What Teen-Agers Want to Know," send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069.

Read the tobacco.

You can learn a lot about how your cigarette will smoke.

Tear open one of your cigarettes.

Look at the shape the tobacco's in.

The shorter and choppy the tobacco, the hotter and faster it's going to smoke.

If your cigarette seems to be long on the "shorts," look into a Kent.

We blend 24 premium tobaccos into Kent and carefully cut them into longer and more uniform strands. These strands intertwine and hold together better.

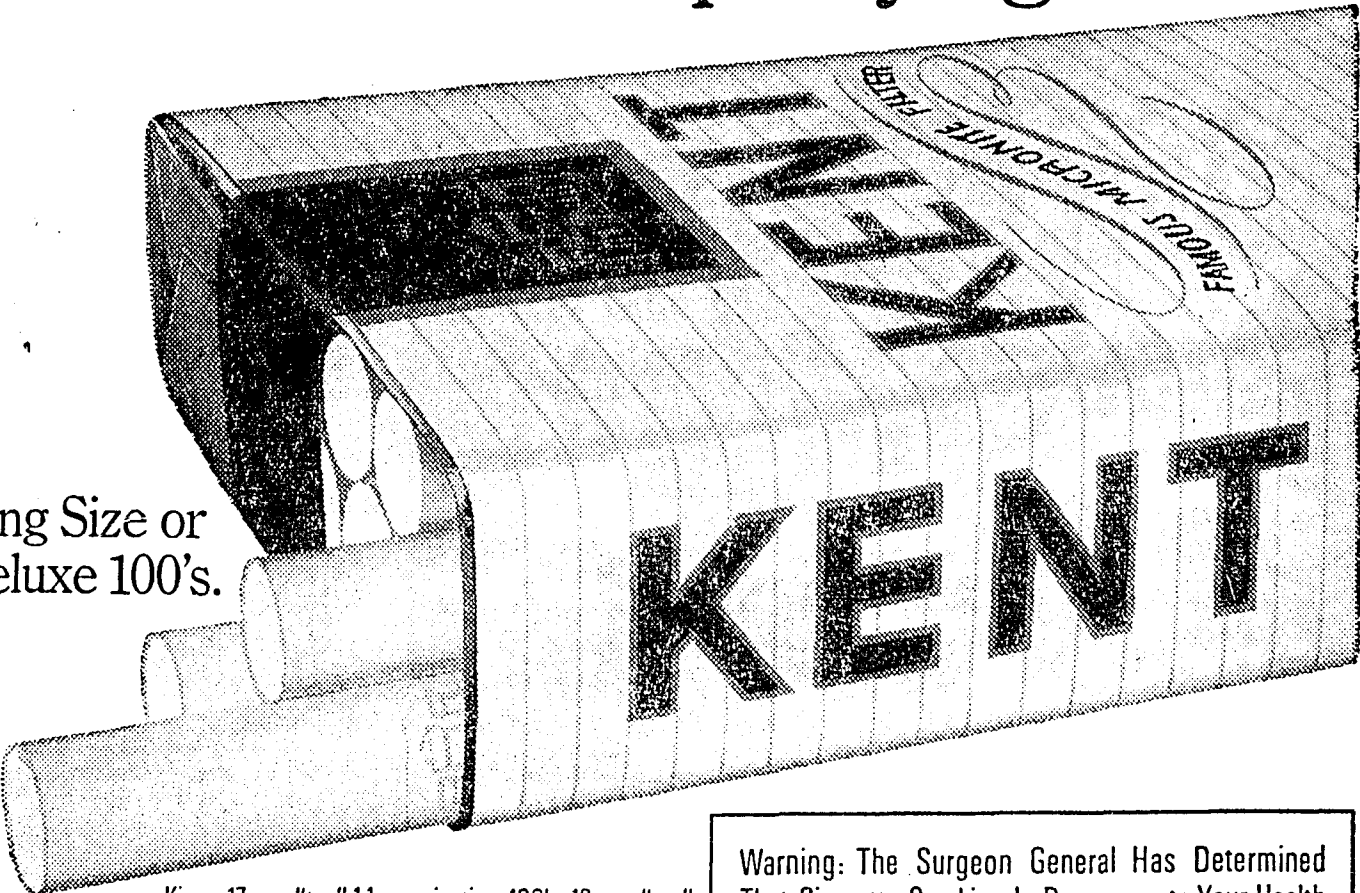

That way they pack firmer and smoke slower and more evenly.

That's important.

Because with a nice, slow, even burn, you get the mild, smooth taste that makes Kent what it is:

America's quality cigarette.

Mild, smooth taste. Micronite filter.

Dear Trouble Shooter
Let's face it, I'm desperate! I had an accident (my horse fell on me) in 1970. Because of this, I walk with a cane, have slurred speech and, as you can see by my handwriting, I don't have fantastic coordination!

Could you find me a guy? Not necessarily a boyfriend, just a guy who would ask me out, talk with me, etc. Incidentally, I'm 19.

C.C.
Laguna Beach

The Trouble Shooter will do all he can, little lady, by forwarding all letters and letting you do the choosing.

There are lots of mature young folks who care more about what's inside a package than about the wrappings and ribbons around it. Chances are you'll be hearing from most of 'em.

Dear Trouble Shooter

I thought my neighbors were flushing their water softener out through their garage, down their drive and on down the sidewalk into the street and that part of it was going onto my grass which is constantly dead in that area.

I suggested they hook a hose onto the water softener and run the water into the street but they tell me it's not their water softener. The water is coming out of their pool.

I've planted grass four times in the past year and before it can grow, it has been killed with salt. I just put in some new seed and within a month it is dead.

I want to be a good neighbor but I don't think they are being fair. Should I offer them a hose?

B.D.
Anaheim

Talk with the folks in the building department at Anaheim City Hall, Ma'am, and ask them to send an inspector out to check your neighbor's pool drainage.

It takes two to be "good neighbors," Ma'am, and it seems to the Ol' Trouble Shooter that you've done your part.

Dear Trouble Shooter

For a bridal shower, I want to frost some small cakes with coconut, but I don't want to color the frosting.

Is there any way I can color the coconut, instead? I've seen tinted coconut used in bakeries, but have never found any available at my market.

G. McV.
Orange

Fill a clean jar half full of coconut, add several drops of food coloring, screw the lid on tight and shake. The coconut will absorb the color evenly. If you want a darker shade, add a drop or two more color. Dry the coconut for a while on paper towels before sprinkling it on top of your frosting or you'll have tinted icing whether you want it or not.

Our daughter is of camp age. She is extremely overweight. I have heard there is a camp that specializes in obese children somewhere in California, but have been unable to locate it.

Can you help?

Camp Murietta West offers a medically supervised weight control program. For a free brochure, write 3052 Clairemont Drive, San Diego 92117.

Dear Trouble Shooter

In the event of death, where does one find facilities with a cooler similar to the type all county morgues use so that the body can lie undisturbed for 48 hours?

After this time period, our religion would permit any type of embalming that a mortuary would perform for burial.

None of the mortuaries I checked in Santa Ana and Orange have facilities for this cooling period that is vital to me. Can you help me find such facilities that could accommodate this 48-hour period?

Orange

All that's necessary, Ma'am, is to make prior arrangements with the mortuary of your choice. Bodies often are held prior to embalming because necessary legal documents have been delayed or for other reasons. There is no law that says a body has to be embalmed prior to burial.

Dear Trouble Shooter

My sister was married in Mexico five years ago. Now she is getting a divorce and her husband tells her their marriage may not have been legal. Is there any way to find out?

F.I.A.

Garden Grove

Was the marriage ever recorded in Mexico or in this country? If so, the marriage is legal. If there's no record, there is no marriage.

In this state, however, if such a marriage is entered into in good faith, the couple is entitled to all of the benefits of a legally married couple. Federal law is different, however, and it will take an attorney, which the Ol' Trouble Shooter is not, to unscramble things for your sister.

Dear Trouble Shooter

My daughter has 40 albums, three to five records in each, of classical music (78 r.p.m.). She would like to give them to some home for older people or some worthy organization.

My telephone number is 538-2672. I'll take the calls and make arrangements for the records to be picked up or delivered.

M.J.S.
Orange

Sit close to that telephone this morning, Ma'am, and again after the evening edition of The Register is delivered to homes throughout the county. You'll be hearing from a lot of interested people, so it might be wise to wait until all the calls are in before you decide who can put the records to the best use.

★ ★ ★

Dear Trouble Shooter

Is there any place in this area where we can pick cherries ourselves?

B.L.A.
Santa Ana

The cherry crop doesn't promise to be very plentiful this year, Ma'am, but growers in the Cherry Valley area will let you pick your own and pay for them. You furnish the container to take the fruit home. The grower will lend you the ladder and bucket. To get to Cherry Valley, take Interstate 10 east beyond Redlands and up the San Geronimo Pass. Just before you get to the summit (2,600 ft.) turn left on Beaumont Ave. and travel through and about a mile beyond town to Cherry Valley.

Cherries ought to be available from now on until about the middle of July.

Competition Keen In Marathon Trike Race

By MARTIN BENSTON
Register Staff Writer

FULLERTON—The recent eighth annual Key Club-sponsored trike marathon at Sunny Hills High School (SHHS) was hailed as a roaring success with keen competition and merriment. The quarter-mile race course wound its way among school buildings and over gravel, water and sand traps set up to make the race more difficult than in past years. The event included three competitive individual races. Emerging as easy winners far ahead of the other contestants were Jim Stark, driver, and Ed Rempalski, pusher, both seniors. Rempalski was the winning driver in last year's race.

The Key Club race also drew seven competing teams. Driver Rich Graham, senior, and pusher Rich Moore, junior, easily won the event. The faculty race brought out two competing teams. Assistant principal R. Bruce Dobson was pushed by Betty Schmidt, teacher. They lost to Henry Valle-kamp who was pushing his wife, Karen Vallekamp, also a teacher. Vallekamp was the winning rider in the teachers race last year.

The teams also had to stop along the route to participate in a pie-eating contest before they could proceed. Trophies and gift certificates were presented to the winners during a brief awards ceremony by Phil Tary, disc jockey for radio station KYMS-FM, Santa Ana. Tary was master of ceremony for the races.

"The purpose of the trike race is to keep school spirit up to the end of the school year," said Alan Kremen who was co-chairman of the event with Drew Elias.

The Key Club, sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of Greater Fullerton, has 25 members on the 2,500-student SHHS campus, said Ray Bukaty, president of the Key Club. Kremen served as lieutenant governor of the Key Club's Division 30 last year and another SHHS student, Todd Spencer, is serving in that post this year. Jim Critten is faculty adviser.

The race was bigger and better this year, commented Kremen. Race officials had difficulty in keeping the enthusiastic students from crowding onto the race course and obstructing the competing racers. Many of the students ran along the race course to cheer on their favorite teams.

Fullerton's Paramedic Program To Start In '74

FULLERTON—The city's new paramedic program is expected to save between 20 and 40 lives in the summer of 1974, predicted Fire Chief Ray E. Eiler.

Progress is being made toward providing mobile emergency medical care services a year after it starts operation throughout the community in an effort to save lives.

The Orange County Medical Center (OCMC) has allotted spaces for the training of eight men from the Fullerton Fire Department in the class beginning in January, said Chief Eiler. The fire department will supervise the paramedic program which will be based at the headquarters fire station, 312 E. Commonwealth Ave.

The city council has approved the purchase of a one-ton van-type truck for $11,130 to be modified and outfitted for use as a paramedic emergency rescue vehicle.

The paramedic program is expected to be financed by federal revenue sharing tax funds over five years. The eight priority projects approved by the council to be financed with an estimated $545,000 in revenue sharing funds to be received during this fiscal year included $48,000 for a paramedic lifesaving program.

The eight men to be trained will be selected by an OCMC board from a list of qualified volunteers submitted by the fire department, said the chief. Although eight certified paramedics will be available, two will be assigned to the unit for each shift.

The fire department expects delivery of the paramedic rescue vehicle in the fall and then will purchase special equipment for outfitting the van. The cost of the vehicle and the equipment will come to $20,000, said Chief Eiler. The men will train with the new van and equipment to become familiar with the equipment they will operate in emergencies.

The city is purchasing the paramedic van under a cooperative purchase with Orange County which has purchased the same type of a vehicle and now is being used in the training of paramedics at OCMC, said Eiler. An inspection of the county vehicle revealed it is basically what the local fire department will require to implement its paramedic program, Chief Eiler said.

To avoid further price increase and to be assured of delivery of a satisfactory paramedic rescue vehicle, Chief Eiler recommended that the council authorize the purchasing agent to buy the van through the county and according to county specifications.

St. Jude Hospital will be the base station for the paramedic program in the North Orange County, said Chief Eiler, adding that patients will be taken to qualified receiving hospitals closest to the accident scene.

After intensive training of the men with their equipment is completed, the paramedic program may start in the city in June, 1974, Eiler said.

Paramedics then will be available 24 hours a day throughout the year to respond to emergency calls primarily concerned with life-saving techniques, according to City Administrator William F. Cornett who announced plans for the paramedic program last February.

This will not be a substitute for ambulance service, explained Cornett. Patients receiving paramedic service will be taken to the hospital in private ambulance, as always, after their condition has been stabilized for the move, Cornett said.

Cypress Park Vote Tuesday

CYPRESS—Residents of the Cypress recreation and park district will go to the polls Tuesday to decide the fate of a $2.75 million park bond issue.

If approved by a two-thirds majority, the bond will raise the current district tax rate of 50 cents per $100 assessed valuation by a maximum of 19 cents. Funds from the bond would finance acquisition of the 15-acre Oak Knoll park site and the 3.2-acre site at Orange Avenue and Denni Street.

Money also would be available for the development of those two sites along with Moody Street and Orange, Eucalyptus, Manzanita, Maple Grove-South, Maple Grove-North, Baroldi-Sycamore and Cypress-Arnold parks.

Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. for the 45,000 residents of the park district, which includes all of Cypress and several county islands to the north.

Man Fatally Shot

POMONA (UPI) — A 23-year-old man was shot to death Saturday night when he forced his way into a home where his wife and their two children were living with the woman's boy friend.

Authorities arrested Donald L. Phillips, also 23, at the scene of the shooting. Killed was Elmo H. Newton.

C-C Opposes Hike In Minimum Wage

ORANGE—Opposition to a proposal before Congress—to increase the minimum wage has been expressed by directors of the Orange County Chamber of Commerce.

"An increase in wage levels would aggravate unemployment," said directors in a resolution opposing HR4757, a bill now pending before the House. The reasons cited by the directors included the bill would:

—"Increase the resistance of employers to hiring the physically handicapped, illiterate, aged, etc.

—"Eliminate an incentive to establish industries in ghetto areas, where the need for employment is most acute.

—"Eliminate many marginal small businesses which employ (numerous) workers."

Directors adopted a resolution favoring a state ballot initiative measure on a proposed constitutional amendment establishing certain tax and expenditure limitations on state government. Petitions to qualify the measure for the ballot are currently being circulated.

On local issues, the directors during their regular monthly meeting last week—voted resolutions favoring the construction of a teaching hospital on the campus of University of California, Irvine, and calling for a coordinated effort by water agencies serving the county to improve the quality of the county's water.

UCI Backs Joint-Use Facilities

IRVINE—UCI Chancellor Dr. Daniel G. Aldrich said this past week that the university was eager to cooperate with the City of Irvine, the Irvine Unified School District and other tax-supported agencies to build joint-use facilities.

Aldrich reaffirmed earlier statements that UCI land could be made available for auditoriums, museums, galleries, conference centers and similar facilities.

In addition to the UCI campus proper, Aldrich said land from the university's 510-acre "inclusion area" could be used for joint-use facilities.

That land is considered by the university as eligible for either extensions of the campus or campus related facilities such as the joint-use buildings or student housing, Aldrich added.

But the chancellor suggested that the city's civic-center facilities should probably not be located immediately adjacent to the university.
